PREFACE

It is not claimed that the record contained in this work is complete.

We have aimed to continue at least one line of descent from each of the 3rd generation from Richard Risley (1.)

We do not wish to be held responsible for the accuracy of names, dates of births, marriages and deaths. It has been our endeavor to collect and tabulate accurately, so far as we could learn, the dates contained in this work.

Those in the family who have erroneously spelled the name "Wrisley," we have corrected by using the original spelling "Risley." The erroneous spelling of this name began with one of Samuel Risley's³ sons, while the father and remaining sons spelled the name "Risley" as originally used.

Those wishing to connect themselves with the family lines should correspond with Mrs. Alfred C. Clapp, East Windsor Hill, Conn., as she is corresponding secretary of the Association of "The Descendants of Richard Risley, (Inc.)"

We wish to recognize the able assistance given by Mr. Albert E. Risley, Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Zada Risley Smith, Hamilton, N. Y.; Mrs. Edwin H. Risley and Mrs. Everett E. Risley.

THE DESCENDANTS OF RICHARD RISLEY

FIRST GENERATION

1 RICHARD RISLEY is believed to have descended from the Lancastershire, England, Risleys previously mentioned in this work. All the evidence now at hand indicates Norse origin of the name Risley. They were lords and knights in the 12th Century in England; the early name in English Genealogy of "Rolf" is a distinctive Norse name. They no doubt emigrated from Norway into Normandy, France, in the 8th century. The name "Risle" indicated a creek in Normandy, near where the Monastery of Bech was located; there the Normans established a great seat of learning, where the Duke of Normandy was first to be touched by the new faith. Every approach to the monastery was crowded with pilgrims; monasteries multiplied in the forest glades, Kings sought shelter from the turmoil of the times in a little valley surrounded with woods of ash and elm through which a brook or brooklet runs down to the "Risle." By adding the final "y" to this name we have Risley. The appearance of the name Risley in the early years of the 12th century in England, in which titles of distinction were borne by members of the Risley family, is indisputable evidence that they found their way from Normandy, France, to England with, or followed William the Conqueror, who vacated and set aside nearly all landed titles granted by Saxon and Danish kings and gave their estates to his "Norman" followers. The Risleys are of Norman descent.

In the Colonial records the name is erroneously spelled, Restley, Rysley, Rissley, Rizley, Risla, Wisla, Wisley. These various modes of spelling related to the same person whose name is spelled in the inventory of his estate, Riseley and Risley, and the last spelling of this name was used by three generations of his descendants with a single exception.

In lineage he was a Norman. In religion a Puritan. Born probably in Oxon, County Lancashire, England, prior to 1615, he emigrated to Massachusetts Bay Colony, Boston, sailing from Downs in the ship "Griffin" July 15th, 1633, in company with Rev. Thomas Hooker, Rev. Wm. Stone, Rev. John Cotton and the Hon. John Haynes. The latter Governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony in the years 1634-5, and of the Connecticut Colony in 1639-1641, 1643, 1645, 1649 and 1653. The ship "Griffin" brought from England many of Hooker's church in Braintree, numbering more than a hundred persons. The vessel landed in Boston Harbor, Sept. 4, 1633. Hooker and his associates located in Newtown (now Cambridge,) Mass., where a church had been previously erected to accomodate the new comers. Hooker was ordained pastor of the new church and Wm. Stone as teacher Oct. 25, 1633. The little colony thus planted was surrounded by the troublesome conditions which seriously affected the entire population of Massachusetts Bay and Salem Colonies, there being a struggle between the church and Civil Magistrates and the people which resulted in the election of John Haynes as Governor, in 1634.

Hooker and his parishioners seemed not to have taken part in the struggle; his followers obtained permission of the General Court to remove to the Connecticut Valley in the winter of 1636.

On May 31, 1636, the entire company turned their backs on the Massachusetts Bay Colony, leaving behind nothing to be desired and betook themselves through a trackless wilderness, on foot to the locality now occupied by the city of Hartford, reaching their destination in about a month. A treaty was consummated with the Indians for a tract of land embraced in the present city of Hartford and the adjoining towns of East Manchester and East and West Hartford. The title of this land was taken by Mr. Samuel Stone and Mr. Wm. Goodwin as trustees for this Colony.

Richard Risley, with the Hooker Company, was one of the original founders of the Commonwealth of Connecticut. Each male member of the Colony was given about two and one-half acres of the above tract of land and the balance was held in common. This division was made in what is now the center of Hartford city. By the terms of the division each man was required to build a house on his land within a year or forfeit his portion of the land to the colony.

In the book of distribution of property in Hartford it is stated: "Samuel Wrislea, son of Richard Wrislea, bap. Nov. 1, 1645. Richard Rislea bap. Aug. 2, 1648." These baptisms occurred in the First Church of Hartford. Richard and Mary, his wife, lived on the east of the "Great River."

October, 1648, Richard, sr., died at Hockanum, leaving his wife and three children surviving. December 7, 1648, an inventory of his estate, amounting to 135£ 5s. 10d., was filed in court.

The land allotted to Richard Risley, on which he built a house, was located on the south side of the Little River, on the westerly side of a road running from George Steele's Mill on Little River south to the Great Swamp. This is supposed to be the street, which now runs through the park, east of the present Capitol of Connecticut and forms Lafayette Street, south of the Capitol grounds. At the first angle in that street is believed to be the location of Richard Risley's house and lot.

In May, 1637, Richard with the other able-bodied men of the Colony, forty in number, under the command of Major John Mason of Windsor, accompanied by men from Wethersfield and Massachusetts Bay Colony, were forced to make war on the Pequot Indians at Groton, where the tribe was substantially annihilated.

On January 14, 1638 (O. S.), Richard participated in the adoption of the "Fundamental Order," the first written Constitution known to history.

He is known to have owned his share of the undivided lands of the Colony and also the following lands, which had been divided and set apart to him, viz:

"One parcell, on which his dwelling house now standeth with yards and gardens beinge, contayninge by estimacon two acres and three rods (more or less) abbuttinge on the highway leadinge from Georg Steels to the Great Swampe on the East and on Wm. Holtons land on the west and on Will. Andrews land on the south and on John Pierces land on the north.

"One parcell of upland contayneing by estimacon two acres and three rods (more or less) abbuttinge on the highway leading from Georg Steels to the Great Swampe on the east, and on the land now common called Rocky Hill on the west, and on the highway leading from the Towne over Rocky Hill toward the west, on the north and on Giles Smiths land on the south.

"One parcell lyeing on the east side of the Great River contayneing by estimation four acres (more or less) abuttinge on the Great River on the west, and on Thomas Alcots land on the east and on Thomas Bunses land on the north and on John Moris' land on the south.

(A parcell stricken out here ——— Transcriber).

"One parcell, which he received of William Holton, contayneing by estimation four acres be it more or less abutting on (sic) land belonginge to ye sayde Richard Rislea for a house lot on the east and on Wm. Blumfieldes land on the west and on the south and on John Barnides land on the north.

"One parcell of upland contayneing by estimation two acres and one roode (be it more or less) which he received in exchange for a psill contayneing by estimation two acres and three roodes which psill now so exchanged abutteth on Georg Steeles land on the east and on John Bayeses land on the west and on the highway leadding frome the Towne to Rock Hill on the north."

Richard Risley was married about 1640 to Mary ———, who was probably born in England.

After the death of her husband, Richard, she became the second or third wife of Will Hill (Hills), who was also one of the landed proprietors of Hartford. He lived at Hockanum, on the east side of the "Great River," and was possessed of some military talent. On May 28, 1653, the General Court passed the following act, which constitutes the first corporate recognition of the territory east of the Great River. It reads as follows:

“The inhabitants on the east side of the Great River are exempt from training with the towns on the west side this present time and are to meet on the east side as Will Hill (Hills) shall appoint, and train there together, and so continue on their training day until the court takes further order; and Will Hill (Hills) is to return the names of those who do not meet according appointment, as notice shall be given them.”

This act of the General Court was never repealed until the incorporation of the town of Glastonbury in 1690, and the town of East Hartford in 1794.

The date of the death of Mary Risley Hill is probably prior to 1680.

The proof of the marriage of Mary with Mr. Hill (Hills) is found in the inventory of Richard Risley's estate and the book of distribution in the Hartford clerk's office, p. 219, it is recorded that on Feb. 26, 1680, Thomas Bunse bought land of Wm. Hill in Podunk Swamp, which formerly belonged to Richard Risley and came to said Hill by right of his wife Mary, “relict of said Risley.” The land was a part of the early undivided lands belonging to Richard Risley and others of Hartford.

Richard and Mary Risley had three children:

- 1 ———.
- 2 SARAH.
- 3 SAMUEL.
- 4 RICHARD.

Who after Richard's death were reared in the family of Wm. Hill, who married Mary Risley.

SECOND GENERATION

2 SARAH RISLEY (*Richard*¹), born 1641.

Nothing positive is known of Sarah. It is supposed, however, that she married a Haynes of East Hartford.

3 SAMUEL RISLEY (*Richard*¹), born Nov. 1, 1645, died July 8, 1670.

At the time of his death he was a resident of the northerly portion of Glastonbury known then, as now, as Naubuck. It is supposed that Samuel never married. The General Court made him a freeman in 1668. Inventory of his estate filed showing 29£. 4s. 10d. taken by Nathaniel Willet and Niccols Si-born. Court Records page 102, 1st Sept., 1670. Creditors to meet 2nd Wednesday in Nov. next. Nov. 9th, 1670, court granted Thomas Edwards administration on the estate and he was directed to pay debts so far as the estate would go. In the inventory it appears that Samuel owed his brother Richard a debt. No mention is made of a widow or children. The court granted Thomas Edwards a discharge. (See Court Records Hartford pages 102-104).

4 RICHARD RISLEY (*Richard*¹), born August 2, 1648. Married prior to 1668 probably when he and his wife were "admitted to full communion in the First Church of Hartford." In 1683 there is a record there, that three of their children were baptized in this church. Under date of May, 1687, it appears they had children baptized whose names are obliterated. The following appears in the baptismal record: "Child to Richard Risley: Mary daughter to Richard Risley baptized April 23rd, 1693: Hannah (Anna or Anner), baptized April 12th, 1695."

The defective church record and the interim of time between marriage and birth and baptism records may be explained by the fact that Richard and wife lived on the east side of the "Great River," south of the Hockanum river both of which rivers must be crossed by boats. The Highway between Hartford and East Hartford had not been constructed and the roadway parallel to the east side of the river was hardly opened.

Richard was a man of some prominence in Hockanum for more than three quarters of a century, owing a large amount of real estate on which houses and farm buildings were erected. He was made a freeman by the General Court in 1669. He was elected "fence viewer" for the east side December 31st, 1687, again Dec. 21st, 1692; Dec. 27th, 1694; Dec. 26th, 1695, Dec. 23rd, 1697.

In the Connecticut town records the name is spelled in various ways.

Richard was a descendant of one of the original proprietors of the undivided lands east of the Great River. On July 5th, 1731, the grant contained 4,428 acres; commissioners were chosen to make division of 1305 acres of this land. Richard was granted in this division lot No. 78 in the second tier of lots beginning at Windsor. Following are the bounds of this lot: "77 to George Knight bounded * * * south upon Richard Risley." "78 to Richard Risley, bounded north upon George Knight and south upon Arthur Smith."

"79 to Arthur Smith bounded north upon Richard Risley."

The land records of Hartford show that Richard owned the following other real estate east of the River:

"One parcell of land, which he bought of Mr. John Crow, being upland lyeing on the east side of Connecticut River and contains about 330 acres be it more or less. It being one mile and a half in length and 110 rods in breadth and is abutted east on the Comons, and west on the sd. Mr. Crowes land and north on land belonging to Mr. Wm. Westwoods heirs, and south on land belonging to Mr. Giles Hamlin as appears by his deed dated the 6th day of June, 1682, and the 14th of January, 1683, acknowledged before John Allen. Assist."

"One parcell of land, which he bought of Nathaniel Willet as administrator to the estate of Jeremy Adams lyeing on the east side of Connecticut river, which is all that piece or parcell of land, which did belong to the said Jeremy Adams, lyeing at a place comonly called Hockanum (except 10 acres of the west end of the said land, which was by the sayd Jeremy Adams engaged unto his late wife, Rebekah Adams, her natural life) and after her decease, during the reversion thereof to be and belong to the sayd Richard Risley, the whole containing by estimation 252 acres be it more or less abutting on Hockanum meadow on the west, on the Comons on the east, and is three miles in length on Mr. Tho. THIRD GENERATION

5 JOHN RISLEY (*Richard*², *Richard*¹), married Mary Arnold, who survived him. He was made a freeman and became a fence viewer in Hockanum in 1698; he was rate collector for the First Church of East Hartford for several years and operated a ferry, which took members of the church, living east of the Hockanum river to the house of worship, for which the church at different intervals paid him sums of money.

Richard² deeded lands in East Hartford to his son John Risley as follows: "One certain piece of parcell of land situate lying and being in the limits of the town of Hartford aforesaid on the east side of the great river at a place commonly called Hoccanum and is sixteen rods in width next the highway and so to run east that width to the three mile End, which parcell of land is bounded east the undivided land west on a highway south on land belonging to the said Richard Risley north with land of Mr. Samuel Wells."

(Entered Hartford Land Records Apr. 13th, 1713, Vol. 2, p. 195).

John died November, 1755, leaving a will, dated January, 1753, which was admitted to Probate in Hartford September 2nd, 1755.

Timothy was appointed his father's executor. This will was witnessed by Jonathan Hills, his brother, Jonathan Risley, and Richard Risley, son of Samuel.

In November, 1755, an inventory of this estate was recorded in Book 17, p. 198, of the Hartford Probate Records. The following is a copy of his will:

"I, John Risley, of Hartford, in the County of Hartford, and Colony of Connecticut in New England, being well in health and of sound mind and memory, make and ordain this instrument to be my Last Will, Revoking all former Wills by me made. My will is that my just debts and funeral Expenses be well and truly paid and discharged by my Executor hereafter mentioned.

ITEM—I will give unto Mary my Well Beloved Wife the one third part of all my Moveable Estate to be her own forever and at her Dispose and the one Third Part of all my Real Estate during her life.

ITEM—I give unto my Son John Risley the sum of Ten Pounds old Tennor Money to be Paid by my Executor.

ITEM—I give unto my daughter Elizabeth the sum of Ten Pounds old Tennor Money to be paid by my Executor.

ITEM—I give unto my Daughter Hannah the sum of Ten Pounds old Tennor Money to be paid by my Executor.

6 SAMUEL RISLEY (*Richard*², *Richard*¹), married Rebecca Gaines August 1, 1704 (Hartford Book of Distributions). Died 1756 in Glastonbury. His will was admitted to Probate April 6, 1756. He was made a "Freeman" prior to December 23, 1703. He was chosen a Fenceviewer for the Hockanum district of Hartford at the election of December 23, 1703; again on December 16, 1707, and again on December 16, 1712.

In 1713 he moved into the town of Glastonbury where he lived and died. He deeded land in this town to his son Samuel. The Glastonbury historian says: "Risley," "Wrisley" this name is a contraction of "Wriothesley" a name in the English peerage also pronounced "Risley."

Thomas was named as Executor of his father's will.

Richard deeded lands to his "son Samuel" as follows: "Two pieces or parcells of land situate lying and being on the east side of Connecticut River in the town of Hartford aforesaid. One parcell of said land is lying at a place commonly called Hoccanum containing by estimation eleven acres be the land more or less founded east on the street or highway west on the meadow north with the land of Mr. Samuel Wells south on my own land to be fifteen rods at the east end next to the street in width and so to continue that width to the west end of said lott with a dwelling house erected upon the said land also more, one parcell of land lying or being part of the land that I bought of John Crow deceased; butted north on land of Jeremiah Risley as may appear by a deed from his father and to begin as far west as the said Jeremiah Risley's land and there butts west on my own land south on land of Thomas Spencer, east on common or undivided land."

Deed dated March 3, 1716-7. Recorded March 28, 1719. Vol. 3, p. 228.

Following is a copy of Samuel Risley's will: "In the name of God Amen this 9th day of May, 1752, I, Samuel Risley of Glastonbury being, of a disposing mind and memory (thro' God's Goodness) do make and ordain this to be my last will and Testament as follows: My mind and will is that my just debts and funeral charges be first paid out of my moveable Estate.

I give and bequeath to my Beloved Wife Rebecca one hundred and fifty pounds out of my moveable Estate old Tennor and also ye free use and improvement of ye one half of my dwelling house and cellar and three acres of land by said house as long as she shall Remain my widow.

I give and bequeaith to my son Samuel Risley ye sum of ten pounds old Tennor out of my moveable Estate.

I give and bequeath to my 2nd son Richard Risley one hundred and fifty pounds old Tennor money.

I give and bequeath to my 4th son Job Risley the sum of one hundred and fifty pounds old Tennor Money.

I give and bequeath to my 3rd son David Risley his heirs and assigns forever the one half of the Lott of land whereon he now dwells in Hartford on the south side including in ye five acres of land and dwelling house, which I gave him before, the said David paying to my Executors hereafter mentioned ye sum of one hundred and fifty pounds old Tennor.

I give and bequeath to my son Oliver Risley his heirs and assigns forever the other half of my Lott of land, lying in Hartford aforesaid on the south side being about fifty acres, he paying to my said Executors ye sum of one hundred pounds old Tennor money.

I give and bequeath to my youngest son Thomas Risley and to his heirs and assigns forever all that Lott of land and buildings whereon I now dwell and all the rest of my Estate both real and personal whatsoever, he paying to my daughter Rebecca Loveland ye sum of fifty pounds old Tennor money and also to my daughter Ruth Hollister the sum of fifty pounds old Tennor money and also to my daughter Sarah Risley the sum of two hundred and fifty pounds old Tennor money, and also to my grand daughter Abigal Risley ye sum of fifty pounds old Tennor money. (Recorded Nov. 23, 1741, Vol. 6, p. 448.)

Nathaniel made a will dated Sept. 8, 1741, which was admitted to Probate Dec. 1, 1741 (Book 13, p. 103 Probate Record). The witnesses to the will were Jonathan Hills, Joseph Bidwell and his brother Jonathan Risley. The Probate records describe him as "Doctor." The Inventory shows he left a considerable estate to his wife and children.

The following is a copy of Nathaniel Risley's M. D. will:

"In the Name of God Amen this twenty eighth day of Sepetmber, 1741—I, Nathaniel Risley of Hartford and Colony of Connecticut, New England being sick but through Gods goodness of sound mind and memory taking to mind that it is appointed for all men once to die—do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament:—

Their children were:

31 ELIZABETH.

32 ZERVIA.

33 DEBORAH.

9 JONATHAN RISLEY (*Richard*², *Richard*¹), married Dorothy —, and died August, 1762.

He was school commissioner several years. He died intestate. Administration Proceedings were taken in Probate Court. An Inventory of his estate was filed in Probate Court showing he left considerable property.

(Book 19, p. 35, Probate Records.)

“At a Court of Probate held at Hartford for the district of Hartford, January 21, 1763, on account of the administration of the estate of Jonathan Risley late of Hartford, deceased, was now exhibited in Court, Moses Risley administrator by which account he had paid in debts and charges the sum of £8, 18s. which amount the Court allows Also that said Administrator now moves this Court for an order of distribution whereupon this Court appointed Sam’l Wells, David Hills and Jonathan Wells of Hartford or any two of them to make a disposition of said estate viz: Dorothy, widow of the said deceased, one third part of the estate when the debts and charges are subtracted therefrom, to be her own property and one third of the lands and buildings of the said deceased for her during life, and to Moses Risley, eldest son of the deceased, a double share of the remaining estate, and to Nathaniel, Richard, Joshua and Rebecca Risley children of the said deceased to such of them as such estate allows after taking what they have been already paid as part of their proportion and share of said estate and make returns thereof to this Court.” (Book 19, p. 491.)

Afterwards other proceedings were had in Probate Court, February 9, 1765. It was decreed as follows:

“After amount of debts and charges the estate of Jonathan Risley late of Hartford deceased, exhibited by Moses and Nathaniel Risley, Administrators by which they had been paid £8, 8s, 3d. which is allowed: Also that said administrators now exhibit a description of said estate under the hands of David Hills, Samuel Wells and John Wells distributed by this Court which distribution this Court agrees and orders is to be kept on file." (Book 19, p. 128.)

Deeds of conveyance of the real estate were made between the mother and the children with the exception of Richard, who does not appear to have joined in the conveyances. Dorothy may have been the second wife of Jonathan. In the East Hartford Cemetery (established in 1710) there is a headstone which states: "Abigail wife of Jonathan Risley died May 13th 1750 in her forty seventh year." (The earliest church records now extant in the First Church of East Hartford is 1745.)

Their children were:

34 MOSES.

35 NATHANIEL.

37 JOSHUA (or JERUSA).

38 REBECCA (married Caleb Benjamin).

He emigrated from Hartford with his brothers Thomas and Jeremiah to the township of Eggharbour, County of Gloucester, on the Sound or Bay of Absecon Creek, N. J.

John Rudd deeded lands in Gloucester Co., N. J., to Richard and Thomas Risley and others as follows:

"Whereas there is a certain tract or parcell of land Situate in the county of Gloucester in New Jersey on the sea coast on a certain island called Absecon Beach surveyed by John Worlidge for Thomas Rudd and duly Returned and Recorded in the Surveyor Generals office by Thomas Gardiner Surveyor General being four hundred acres and something more as by draught and Certificate thereof appears and lyes on the north east end of said Beach by the sea the Sound and Absecon Inlet and being about seven hundred perches in length more or less."

"Richard Risley eleven eighty third parts, Thomas Risley six eighty third parts and two-third parts of one eighty-third part."

"Note, Richard Risley hath eleven parts." (Recorded in office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, N. J., in Liber P. W. J. Deeds—p. 29.)

He made his will dated May 2, 1737. He died prior to June 17, 1740. On that date his will was admitted to probate and is now on record in the Secretary of the State's office, Trenton, N. J.

The following is a copy of Richard's will:

"In the name of God amen, the second day of May, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven, I Richard Risley, senior, of the township of Eggharbour, in the County of Gloucester, in the Province of New Jersey, Yoeman being of perfect mind and memory, thanks be given unto God, therefore calling unto mind the mortality of my body and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament that is to say principally and first of all I give and recommend to God that give it, and my body I recommend to the Earth, to be buried in decent Christian burial at the discretion of my executrix. Nothing doubting, but at the General Ressurrection I shall receive the same again by the Mighty power of God, and as touching such worldly estate wherewith it hath pleased God to Bless me with this life, I give demise and dispose of the same in the following manner and form.

IMPRIMIS—I give and bequeath unto my two sons, Peter Risley and Thomas Risley, the land whereon I now live containing three hundred acres of up land and meadow. Beginning at the line that divides my son Richard's plantation and so from thence down to the Sound or Bay of Absecon Creek to be equally divided between them, both the upland meadow shall be so equally divided that the one half shall be equal to the other half, both in quantity and value, only that my son, Thos. Risley, shall have that part joining to the house together with the dwelling house and other improvements about it as far as the Kings road and then as much of the remainder of that tract as will make it equal in value and quantity and each of the said divisions so made as aforesaid, I do give unto them severally (viz) the one Equal to my son Peter Risley and the Equal half to my son Thomas Risley by them freely to be possessed and enjoyed by them and their heirs forever.

ITEM—I give and bequeath all the rest of my land such as Cedar Swamps and Beeches (except a piece of land containing about Ten acres lying at the head of Absecon Creek, which I give to my son, Peter, and to my son, Thomas, to be Equally divided between them and their heirs forever and all other out lands, I give and bequeath unto my three sons, Peter Risley and Thomas Risley to be equally divided among them to be freely possessed and enjoyed by them and their heirs forever.

ITEM—I give and bequeath unto my five daughters, Mary, Jemimah, Esther, Sarah and Rebecca (viz) after all my just Debts are paid to be Equally divided among them two thirds of all my moveable estate Equally divided in value.

ITEM—I give Will and Bequeath unto My Beloved Wife Esther Risley the use of all my movable estate during Widow Hood, but if she shall marry that then she shall have one third part of my movable estate to her own proper use and behoof and the other two thirds shall be equally divided amongst my Daughters as aforesaid and lastly I constitute, make and ordain My Dearly Beloved Wife to be my Executrix of this my Last Will and Testament and hereby utterly disallow revoke and disannull all and every other Testaments,

It is not certain that Jeremiah is a son of Richard. He may have been a son of Samuel Risley.

Richard Risley² on March 16, 1716, executed a deed in which he described himself as "Richard Risley Senior" to Jeremiah Risley deeding lands as follows:—

"One messuage or tract of land situate lying and being in Hartford, on the East Side of the Connecticut River, butted and bounded as follows, west on Richard Risley Senior, or the North Curt path that goes across Stony Brook and on James Forbes land North and East on the Common land and South on Richard Risley, being forty-three rods in width."

(The Deed is dated Mar. 16, 1716-17 and signed "Richard Wrisle." Recorded April 25, 1717, in Vol. 3, p. 107.)

No mention is made in the deed of the relationship of these parties. Richard's name is signed to this deed "Wrisle," probably the copyists error in recording as the usual spelling is maintained through the body of the deed "Risley."

Jeremiah emigrated to Gloucester Co., N. J., where he died prior to 1796. Sept. 3, 1796, letters of Administration were issued on his estate to Nathaniel Risley. These letters remain on record in Secretary of State's office in Trenton, N. J.

It would appear from the letters that they were issued some years after his death or he lived to a great age.

It is probable that Nathaniel was his son.

Between August 17, 1760 and 1772 lands were conveyed in Gloucester County, N. J., to Richard and Samuel.

Grants of land were made between 1765 and 1774 by Peter, Richard and wife, Richard Jr., Richard Sr., Richard and wife and Samuel.

These deeds remain of record in Trenton, N. J.,

The Risleys in New Jersey, Southern Pennsylvania and Maryland are descendants of Richard and Jeremiah.

Possibly some of them descended from Samuel a later generation of Hartford Risleys. Jeremiah Risley m. Dinah Gale, of New Jersey.

Their children:

47 SAMUEL.

48 SARAH, b. Mar. 3, 1734; m. Read, d. June 4, 1796.

49 JEREMIAH, JR., b. Dec. 14; m. Margaret Doughty.

In the church records of East Hartford and in the History of East Hartford by Hon. J. O. Goodwin it is stated that Charles was Collector in 1710. If this is true he must have been a son of Richard or of Samuel. No grandson of Richard could have been of proper age for the office of Collector in 1710.

Charles Risley took and gave title of lands in Glastonbury, in 1758. (Glastonbury Land Records, Vol. III.)

Nothing definitely is known of her except her baptismal record in the First Church of Hartford.

14 HANNAH RISLEY (Anna or Anner) (*Richard*², *Richard*¹), baptized April 12, 1695; married Sargt. James Brainerd Dec. 23, 1717; died May 7, 1772, aged 77 years.

Sargt. James Brainerd was a son of Deacon James Brainerd and Deborah Dudley. He was born in Haddam, Conn.,

March, 1696-7. His wife's name is spelt "Anner Risley." There is little or no doubt that she was the daughter of Richard Risley. Their children were:

50 BENJAMIN, b. April 19, 1718.

51 JEDEDIAH, b. August 9, 1720.

52 REBECCA, b. August 15, 1722.

Lands were deeded to Moses Risley in East Hartford by his brothers, Elijah, Allen and David, in 1810. The land was a portion of land willed by Moses, sr., to his wife. The deed was acknowledged before Kellogg Hurlburt, Justice of the Peace, Whitestown, N. Y., Oct. 11, 1810. The deed recites the receipt of one hundred dollars from Moses Risley of East Hartford, Conn. It describes the grantors as formerly of East Hartford. The will of Moses Risley is dated June 26, 1821, and witnessed by Allen and David Risley, his brothers. In this will he mentions the names of his "four beloved children" as given above.

The deed and will were never recorded or probated.

Moses Risley served in the Revolutionary War. He moved to Vienna, Oneida Co., N. Y., where he died.

90 ELIJAH RISLEY (Moses⁴, Jonathan³, Richard², Richard¹), b. Dec. 25, 1756; d. 1841; m. Phoebe Bills, b. July 24, 1761, Hartford, Conn.

Elijah was administrator of his father's, Moses, estate. He was a soldier of the Revolution and Sept. 28, 1819, he was enrolled as pensioner, in the New York agency, at the rate of $8.00 per month to commence May 16, 1818. He removed from East Hartford to Whitestown, (now New Hartford, N. Y.,) in 1788. In the Federal census of 1790 the name of Elijah and Allen Risley, his brother, appear in this census in Whitestown, N. Y.

Whitestown at this time embraced all territory west of a line drawn from Ogdensburg to Pennsylvania line passing through the fort at Fort Schuyler, now Utica. In this territory the census showed 48 families.

On July 11, 1793, Elijah Risley, Jedediah Sanger and Samuel Wells commenced the publication of the Whitestown Gazette; it being the first newspaper printed in New York State west of Albany. This paper has continued its publication until the present time being now (1908) known as the Utica Herald Dispatch. The first issue was printed in a barn which stood back of the present Presbyterian Church in New Hartford, N. Y. A copy of this paper is in the possession of the Oneida Historical Society at Utica.

Elijah Risley moved from New Hartford to Cazenovia, N. Y. He acquired a tract of land in Cox's patent. He erected a brick house in the forks of the road from Cazenovia to Morrisville, N. Y. He contracted to build the Cherry Valley turnpike from Cherry Valley to Cazenovia. Failure was the result of this enterprise due to a quick-sand swamp. From Cazenovia he moved to Fredonia, Chautauqua County, N. Y., where he died in 1841.

Their children were:

- 228 BETSEY, m. Seth Risley.
- 229 HORACE, m. Harmony Root and moved to Illinois.
- 230 ELIJAH, JR.
- 231 PHILENA, m. Thomas Warren, both deceased.
- 232 FANNY, m. James Brigham, both deceased.
- 233 PHOEBE, m. Philip Fellows, both deceased.
- 234 SOPHIA, m. Geo. A. French, merchant, Dunkirk, both deceased.
- 235 WILLIAM.

236 LEVI, m. Sophia A. Darling, moved to Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

92 ALLEN RISLEY (Moses⁴, Jonathan³, Richard², Richard¹), b. Jan. 20, 1760; d. Feb. 17, 1838; m. Lucy, d. April 5, 1832.

Allen immigrated from East Hartford, Conn., to Whittstown, N. Y. He was appointed lieutenant in New York State militia, March 25, 1797. He was a member of the first common law jury impanelled in Oneida County, the Court being held in a barn at Fort Stanwix (now Rome.) He acquired title to a farm located on the Chuckery Road, New Hartford, N. Y. The land was deeded to him by George Washington. The deed is now in possession of the New York City Historical Society; placed there by Samuel Kirkland. The law firm of Kirkland & Bacon partitioned this land after Allen's death. The decree in petition is now on file with the clerk of the Court of Appeals in Albany. Allen Risley died without issue. He was a brother of Moses Jr., David and Elijah, all of whom settled in New York State.

93 MINDWELL RISLEY (Moses⁴, Jonathan³, Richard², Richard¹), b. Nov. 23, 1764; living Mar. 6, 1839; m. Eli Risley.

They resided in Vienna, N. Y., in 1810.

94 DAVID RISLEY (Moses⁴, Jonathan³, Richard², Richard¹), b. Nov. 23, 1766; d. Aug. 24, 1834; m. Cynthia Gillette, b. —, 1769; d. Aug. 26, 1845.

Both are buried in the old New Hartford cemetery beside his brother, Allen and wife.

David was appointed Ensign in State militia, April 8, 1795, and made Adjutant, April 14, 1800. Was promoted to captain, June 8, 1802. He was engaged as a merchant during life. He owned and used the first carriage in Oneida County, which caused his neighbors to prophesy disaster, which never overtook him.

Their children were:

- 237 ELECTA, m. David Randall.
- 238 CYNTHIA, m. Peter Clark, New Jersey, eminent lawyer. No children.
- 239 LUCY, m. James S. Foster, New Hartford, N. Y.
- 240 HAMILTON D., m. Mary Blakely.
- 241 GEORGE, m. Sarah Dakin, dau. of Samuel Dakin, Utica, N. Y.

95 JONATHAN RISLEY (*Nathaniel*¹, *Jonathan*³, *Richard*², *Richard*¹), b. Oct. 17, 1749; d. April 4, 1813; m. Phœbe Deming, 1773; b. 1753; d. Oct. 10, 1833.

Phœbe Deming was a lineal descendant of John Deming, who was one of the persons named in the Connecticut charter of Chas. II. of England.

Jonathan and Phœbe and family emigrated from E. Hartford, Conn., and settled in the 19th township, now called Brookfield, Madison Co., N. Y., between 1792 and 1797. All of their children were baptized in the First Cong. Church of E. Hartford, Conn., except Sylvester, who was born in Brookfield, N. Y.

Jonathan obtained title to a large tract of land from the state. At this time the land was located in an unbroken forest, 25 miles from nearest grist-mill. Here he built a log house, which was soon afterwards replaced by a large frame house, which is now a barn still standing on the Winthrop Allen farm in the north-western portion of the town of Brookfield. The farm remained in the family for more than a century. Two brothers, Ward and Jerry, located in the immediate neighborhood of Jonathan. Ward erected a frame house, in which he lived a few years and then returned to Conn.

Jeremiah lived and died in the township of Brookfield.

Jonathan and Phœbe and their son Jonathan and dau. Louisa are buried in the Terrytown Cemetery, Sangerfield, N. Y.

Margaret O. Slocum, born Sept. 8, 1828, daughter of Joseph Slocum, Syracuse, N. Y. She survives in 1909.

Mrs. Sage was descended on her father's side from Capt. Miles Standish; the Mayflower pilgrim.

"Her father, Joseph Slocum, m. Margaret Pierson Jer-main; son of William Brown Slocum and Olivia Standish Joselyn, daughter of Stockbridge Joselyn and Olivia Standish, who was daughter of David Standish and Hannah Magonn, who was the son of Thomas Standish and Mary Carver; son of Alexander Standish and Desire (Doty) (Sherman) Holmes; son of Capt. Myles Standish and wife, Barbara."

Mrs. Sage has presented to the Emma Willard Seminary, Troy, N. Y., where she was graduated, a handsome dormitory, called Russell Sage Memorial Hall.

The marriage with Miss Slocum was a very happy one; his friends declaring it was his best bargain and Russell's maxim was "The tender care of a good wife is the finest thing in the world."

Sage line: Russell Sage, son of Elisha Sage and Prudence Risley; Elisha, jr., son of Elisha, 1755-1801, m. Martha Montague; Elisha, sr., son of Amos 1722-1759, m. Rebecca Wilcox; Amos, son of Timothy, 1678-1725, m. Margaret Holibert.

Timothy, son of David Sage and 2nd wife, Mary Wilcox.

David Sage came to America from Wales. An original settler in Middletown, Conn., 1852.

Prudence Risley Sage, mother of Russell Sage, was born Dec. 9, 1778, daughter of Job Risley, jr., Hockanum, Conn., and Mary Webster, who was son of Job, sr. and Beriah Fox; son of Samuel Risley and Rebecca Gaines of Glastonbury; son of Richard, Jr.; Richard, son of Richard Risley, Sr., East Hartford, Conn. Richard, Sr., was one of the Hooker party, which came from Mass., into Conn., and became one of the founders of the Commonwealth of Connecticut. The Risley line extends back into the English peerage: (See Risley English Genealogy).

Prudence Risley's mother, Mary Webster, was a lineal descendant from John Webster of the Hooker party. John Webster was deputy governor of Conn., 1655-56, and Gov. from 1656-57. She was a cousin, once removed, of Noah Webster, the lexicographer.

Russell Sage left home at the age of 14 to engage in business; realizing his need of education he studied evenings and attended night school. His industry being great he soon succeeded in business and kept his mind nourished by much reading and study. Beginning in mercantile lines he soon became interested in transportation by water and railroad, succeeding so well that he abandoned mercantile pursuits in Troy.

He took a prominent part in public affairs and became Alderman in Troy, treasurer of Rensselaer County for seven years. In 1848 was a delegate to Whig National Convention. He was once defeated and twice elected to Congress; held important places on committees and caused the appointment of a committee which formed the Association of Mount Vernon and secured the purchase of the estate of Washington, which was made a memorial of the Father of his Country.

Upon expiration of the second term in Congress, Russell Sage determined to forsake politics and devote himself to business alone.

During the financial crisis of 1857 he was able to save himself and others from ruin, and immediately engaged extensively in railroad transportation, becoming director of more than twenty corporations. 1863 he removed from Troy to New York in order to promote his own and other railroad interests and operate in stock. Here he became the greatest financial factor of his time, with a high standard for honorable, accurate and punctual service in his department. His great energy and faithfulness were his marked characteristics.

"He stood firm and true for nearly half a century at the very center of trust in the financial world and in the fierce and sometimes unfriendly light of publicity."

(See N. Y. Genealogical and Biographical Record, Oct., 1906).

Many of the distinctive characteristics of Russell Sage can be traced to his maternal ancestors.

June 13, 1827, Ebenezer Talcott, son of Joseph Talcott and Anna Boardman of Wethersfield, Conn. He was born July 20, 1804; died Oct. 16, 1865, at Ronald, Mich. They emigrated from Madison, N. Y., to Ionia County, Michigan, with their family about 1850.

Ebenezer was a lineal descendant of John Talcott, one of the Hooker party, who was a very forceful man in the Connecticut Colony. He was a graduate of Oxford University and prior to his emigration to America was in the employment of the Duke of Warwick; he was treasurer of the Connecticut Colony from 1652 to 1678 covering a period of twenty-six years.

Ebenezer was a descendant of Joseph Talcott, who was probate judge of Hartford; Lieutenant-Governor in 1724-25, and Governor of the Connecticut Colony in 1756-59, covering the period of the Indian wars which preceded the Revolution.

John Talcott was a member of the Mass. General Court prior to his removal to Hartford. He was named one of seventeen men who were granted the power of government in the charter of the Connecticut Colony granted by Charles the Second of England in 1662. This charter was hid in the famous Charter Oak of Hartford when attempt was made by the Crown to obtain possession of the same.

When the effort was made to obtain this charter from the Colonies John Talcott and James Wadsworth produced it, when the candle was blown out and the charter was hidden in the Charter Oak.

RISLEY, SAMUEL DOTY, 1845,

Professor of Ophthalmology, and Manager University Hospital since 1896, was born in Cincinnati, O., 1845; early education in schools of Ohio and Iowa; served through Civil War with 20th Reg. Iowa Volunteers; graduated M. D. Univ. of Pa., 1870; Chief of Eye Clinic, Univ. Hospital, 1872-90; Lect. on Ophthalmoscopy, and Asst. Ophthalmic Surgeon; Prof. Astronomy at Wagner's Free Inst. of Science, 1871-74; Ph. D. Wagner's Inst., 1874; Visiting Surgeon Dispensary Staff of Protestant Episcopal, 1873-76; Out-Door Physician to Northern Dispensary, 1871-74; Ophthalmologist and Otologist Protestant Episcopal Hospital, 1877-83; A. M. Univ. of Iowa, 1883; Prof. Ophthalmology Philadelphia Polyclinic and College for Graduates in Medicine and Alumni Manager Univ. Hospital since 1896; holds many professional offices.

Samuel Doty Risley, A. M., M. D., Ph. D., was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, January 16, 1845, descended from a very old English family. Richard Risley arrived in America with Cotton and Hooker in 1633, locating in Newtown (now Cambridge), and moved into the Connecticut valley with Hooker's party, their names being commemorated on a shaft which stands in the Central Presbyterian Churchyard Cemetery in Hartford. (Rev.) Dr. Risley was educated in the public schools of Cincinnati and later at Davenport, Iowa, whither his parents had emigrated in 1857. When but seventeen years of age, stirred by patriotic impulses of the period, he enlisted with the Twentieth Regiment of Iowa Volunteers, serving his country until the close of the Civil War. In the autumn of 1865 he entered the Iowa State University, at Iowa City, but broke off his College course in April, 1867, in order to take up medical studies in the office of Dr. Lucius French of Davenport. Here he remained until the following year, matriculating in 1868 in the Medical Department at the University of Pennsylvania. He graduated as Doctor of Medicine in 1870, and remained in Philadelphia, making himself a specialist on eye diseases. In 1871 he was appointed Clinical Assistant at

Wills Eye Hospital, and in the following year was made Chief of the Eye Clinic at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, a position which he held until 1890. He early became a Lecturer Ophthalmoscopy in the University and Assistant Ophthalmic Surgeon to the University Hospital. At the present time he is an Alumni Manager of the University Hospital. Dr. Risley's outside interests as a medical practitioner have been very large. For three years he was Visiting Surgeon on the Dispensary Staff of the Protestant Episcopal Hospital, and later served as Ophthalmologist and Otologist to that Hospital. He is now Attending Surgeon at the Wills Eye Hospital, Ophthalmic Surgeon to the Training School for the Feeble Minded at Vineland, N. J., and Ophthalmologist on the Medical Board of the Pennsylvania Training School for the Feeble Minded until elected to the Board of Managers in 1897. He is also Professor of Diseases of the Eye at the Philadelphia Polyclinic, and Fellow of the College of Physicians, and served for two years as chairman of the section on Diseases of the Eye. Dr. Risley has several times gone abroad for study and observation, and was a member of the International Ophthalmic Congress at Edinburgh in 1894, and at Utrecht in 1899. He is a member of the American Ophthalmological Society, and served as its President in 1908, the Climatological Society, the American Academy of Medicine, of which he was elected President in 1900, and the American Medical Association, and was Chairman of the Section in Ophthalmology of the last named society in 1893. For a few years in his younger life Dr. Risley was Professor of Astronomy in Wagner's Free Institute of Science in Philadelphia, this teaching body having conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1874. In 1883 he received a Master of Arts degree from the University of Iowa, where he had been a student in his youth. From early life Dr. Risley has been active in religious and philanthropic work, his interest in the Young Men's Christian Association having been continuous for many years. For a long time he was Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Alumni Society of the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and is at present Vice-President of the society, and he has been the Alumni Manager of the University Hospital from 1896 to this date. Dr. Risley is a member of the Art Club, the Union League, and the University Club of Philadelphia. He was married in 1870 to Emma D. Thompson, and has his offices at 1728 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, having a country house at Media, Delaware County, Pennsylvania. For years Dr. Risley has been a frequent and industrious contributor to the literature of his special branch of medical science. His publications number upwards of two hundred papers and articles. The work upon which he personally sets the most value is that relating to the hygiene of vision in the schools. This is a subject to which he has given his uninterrupted study since 1878, and his investigations have been productive of much good in improving the hygienic conditions in our public and private schools. He was the first to point out the relation existing between certain congenital defects in the eyes of children and the increasing percentage of near sight in the schools—hence the necessity for an examination of the children's eyes as a preliminary to their admission to the schools.

He is one of the directors of the Descendants of Richard Risley, Incorporated.

Child:

1312 ELIZABETH LILLIAN, b. Mar. 19, 1901.

John Somers, emigrant ancestor, married Hannah Hodgkins. Their first child was born 1685.

Their second son was Richard Somers and married Judith Setart. Their daughter, Judith Somers, b. Apr. 5, 1743; married — Risley.

John Somers, grandson of John and Hannah H. Somers, married *Esther*⁴ Risley, Feb. 9, 1744 (4th generation). (The name is sometimes spelled Hester and often used, one for the other; Esther is the proper name; Hester, a nickname).

Polly Somers, daughter of Isaac, married — Risley.

Frederick Somers married Sophia Risley.

Abigail Somers (sister of Esther R. Somers Roberts) married Samuel Risley.

Mary Somers, married Baker Risley.

Joseph Risley Somers, b. Nov. 29, 1803.

Sarah Somers b. Feb. 2, 1817, m. Samuel Risley, b. June 11, 1817.

The above are among Somers records (relation to each other not known). New Jersey.

Following from N. J. marriages:

Margaret Doughty and John Risley, m. May 4, 1758.

James Holmes and Leah Risley, m. July 5, 1744.

George Hawkins and Jemima Risley, m. July 31, 1758.

Anna Parman and Peter Risley, m. Jan. 22, 1736.

John Somers and Esther⁴ Risley (see above), m. Feb. 9, 1744.

Edward Higbe and Jemima Risley, m. May 4, 1738.

By a Somers record, John Somers m. Hannah McLean.

They had a son, Joseph Risley McLean, b. Nov. 29, 1802. They had four children. (If you want the children of John⁴ Somers (and Hannah McLean), son of John and Esther Risley, refer to Mrs. Samuel T. Hanna, 1128 West Berry St., Fort Wayne, Indiana.)

Among Quaker records, New Jersey, is frequently seen the name of Esther Haines, and as Esther R.(?) Somers was a Friend, it is strong evidence that Esther Risley's mother's name may have been Esther Haines. Miss Mary S. Allen, Deputy Custodian (1908) of Friends Records at Friends Library at 142 North 16th St., Philadelphia, is very reasonable in her charges, and for a small fee, say one dollar, she will look up a name and send copy.

Mrs. S. T. HANNA.

INCOMPLETE LIST.

Although the unbroken line of descent from Richard¹ is indicated in most of the following records, sufficient data as to some of the ancestors have been lacking to make it possible to place them in their proper generations and to give them distinctive numbers in the body of the book. When possible reference is made to the nearest ancestor who carries a number so that from that point back to Richard¹ the records may be readily followed.

THE STORY OF THE REUNION

August 3rd, 1904, in East Hartford, Conn., was an ideal day and the auditorium of the East Hartford Congregational Church was well filled at the opening of the morning meeting, representatives from sixteen states being present. The meeting was promptly called to order by Edwin H. Risley of Utica, N. Y., the President of the Risley association.

Rev. Francis P. Bachelor, pastor of the Hockanum Congregational church, opened the meeting by invoking the Divine Blessing.

C. Henry Olmsted of East Hartford delivered an address of welcome on behalf of the citizens of East Hartford and of the members of the Congregational church. He referred in his remarks to his ancestor, James Olmsted, who left England and sailed to America in 1633 in company with Richard Risley, and extended the hospitality of the occasion in the name of his ancestor and his descendants.

Edwin H. Risley responded to the address of welcome. He referred to the feeling of kinship which should bind together the descendants of the noble band that sailed from England for America in the "Good Ship Griffin" in the summer of 1633. Included among the number were such eminent divines as Rev. John Cotton, Rev. Thomas Hooker and Hon. John Haynes, afterward Governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony and the first Governor of the Colony of Connecticut.

He stated that he felt at home in this church where his father and mother were married in 1833 and where hundreds of his kinsmen had been baptized, who had lived and died in the faith of the Gospel here proclaimed. From this church many of his ancestors have been borne to their last resting places.

He expressed the hearty thanks of the members of the association to the generous people who had extended their hospitality to the gathering.

The musical program, in charge of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Cornish of Naubuc, Mrs. Holt and Mrs. E. Bowdin of Hartford, was greatly enjoyed by all.

Hon. John E. Risley of New York, former United States minister to the Court of Denmark from 1893 to 1898, delivered a short address on "Our Kinsmen in England."

He referred to a personal acquaintance with Halford C. Risley, the present head of the Risley family in England, and the pleasant visit he had at his home in Didington, Oxfordshire. He is about 69 years of age and is a fellow of New College, Oxford University.

The speaker described his visit to the old "Risley" chapel or church at Chetwood erected in the eleventh century—with the "Risley" coat of arms emblazoned on the walls of the building. He stated that the Risley family came into England from Normandy and that it was probable that they came into Normandy from the Juteland.

He called attention to the structure of the Risley name. The word "Risle" in Norse language means creek or stream, and the English added the final "y" which formed our name. He referred in an interesting manner to the honorable history of the family in England during a period of more than eight hundred years and said we could be proud of our complete genealogy.

ADDRESS OF EDWIN H. RISLEY

Kinsmen and Friends:

In the early days of June, 1636, the pioneers, less than one hundred in number, of different ages and of both sexes, rested at the end of a toilsome journey through a trackless wilderness on the elevated tongue of land formed by the junction of Little River with the Great River on the westerly bank of the Connecticut at a point which later bore the name of "Sentinel Hill" in the central portion of what is now the city of Hartford. Isolated from danger of attack by Indians, they lighted their camp-fires, pitched their tents, erected bark shanties, tethered their herds, posted sentinels and rested.

This colony in the early days of May, 1636, sold their landed possessions in Newtown (now Cambridge) in the Massachusetts Bay Colony to a new colony of settlers under the leadership of Rev. Mr. Shepard, and determined to make the journey into the Valley of Connecticut and to establish their future homes outside of the territory embraced within royal grants. They turned their backs on the old homes which had sheltered them for three or four years and turned their faces resolutely toward the Connecticut Valley, leaving behind them nothing to be desired, looking forward with high hopes to the establishment of new homes, a new church and new civil government. On this journey of over a hundred miles the sturdy men guarded their wives and families from the hostile attacks of the Indians, clearing a track in the forest for their passage, floundering through marshes and streams and crossing the Great River upon rafts. The obstacles and perplexities encountered were known only to the pioneers and totally unknown to the present generations.

It is not easy for us to understand all of the causes that operated upon the minds of the men and women composing this company, which prompted them to leave their native land three thousand miles away and seek new homes in this Valley of the Connecticut. They were all Englishmen and Puritans in religious faith. The seeds of the Protestant Reformation sown in the reign Henry VIII had germinated and were bearing fruit.

The Protestant Reformation in England substituted the ruling Monarch for the Pope as the head of the church, and a few changes in doctrines and forms of worship. Those who doubted or refused to conform to these changes subjected their property, liberty and lives to the peril of destruction. The leaven of unrest had entered the minds of thousands of home loving Englishmen. Some were not satisfied with the doctrines, forms of worship and practices of the Church of England; others wished for greater simplicity; many disliked the formalism in worship; a very large number wished to purify the whole ministration of the church, and correct the lives and habits of the clergy and the church communicants. This class came in time to be known as "Puritans."

In 1567 a number of devout ministers of the English church despairing of securing the correction of the grievous errors then existing in the church, separated themselves from the church and held religious services in private houses.

Robert Bonn, a clergyman of the English church in 1580, publicly advocated a separation from the church for those who felt they could not secure a proper hearing in the church. This body of men and women came in time to be known as "Separatists"; the former were Conservatists and the latter Radicals. The "Puritans" and "Separatists" were jailed, whipped, hung, quartered and drawn in a manner too shocking to be written about. Other people who were considered objectionable to those in authority were falsely accused and visited with the severe penalties of the law; life, liberty and property were alike insecure in every part of the British Empire. For more than thirty years a reign of terror held the minds of Englishmen, not unlike the reign of terror during the French revolution.

In Nottinghamshire, a small religious congregation listened to the preaching of John Robinson. They incurred the displeasure of their neighbors and the officers of the law and in 1608 they fled in a body to Holland to escape the vengeance of their persecutors. They founded an English colony at Leyden and were joined from time to time by others. Holland for years had been engaged in a deadly struggle with Spain for liberty of thought and speech. In this struggle, modern historians say, more than eight millions of men and women suffered martyrdom for opinion's sake. The Dutch treated the English emigrants with respect and courtesy, but the English saw that their native tongue would be soon lost and that their children and grandchildren would be merged into the Dutch, which was somewhat deprecated by the English. They determined to emigrate from Leyden to America. After delays and difficulties they set sail from Southampton on the 16th of September in the "Mayflower" and after a stormy passage came to anchor off Plymouth, Massachusetts, November 21st, 1620. The volition of the little band of Pilgrims at Leyden was not alone the determining factor that decided them to emigrate to America.

In 1606 James (VI of Scotland) I of England granted a royal charter to a company of London merchants and capitalists to a tract of land from Nova Scotia to Long Island, to a corporation afterwards known as the Plymouth Company. Lands from Cape Fear to the Potomac River to another band of capitalists afterwards known as the London Company. The grants were to run in strips across the continent from east to west in the same parallels. The strip of land between the Potomac and Long Island was open to both companies by the terms of their charters, with the restriction that if either company planted a colony first, the other colony should not plant another colony within one hundred miles of the first one.

The Pilgrims intended to locate on this middle strip and sailed under the auspices of the Plymouth Company and with their aid financially, promised to repay the Company with high usury in three years. They landed not at the point of destination, but at Plymouth Rock on the Massachusetts coast. The London Company had established a colony at Jamestown in the year 1609. The most that can be said of these colonists is that they were composed of the waifs of society brought by stress of great perplexities to America, to satisfy the greed of two commercial companies. James I was dead. In 1625 his son, Charles I, assumed the purple toga and wore the crown. The royal charters granted by his father were under one pretext or another revoked or annulled by the king's courts. King Charles hated an independent legislature. He was an imperialist with a sublime faith in the right of "Kings to Rule." The colonies, however, had different opinions, so they appointed their own governors and chose their own legislative bodies. This nettled and stirred the ire of Charles, so he sent governors of his own selection and issued his royal decrees and undertook to enforce them. He granted new charters under restricted governors. Beckley in Jamestown ruled the colony for more than a quarter of a century with a spirit of despotism unequalled in colonial history.

When Charles I ascended the throne the Puritans had become very strong; to check their growth and curb their haughty spirit Charles dismissed his parliament in March, 1629, and closed its doors until 1640 and undertook to rule England according to his royal will. In 1630 the Plymouth Colony numbered less than three hundred. Matters in England grew rapidly worse; Charles had an intense hatred of the Puritans and set out to curb and degrade them and to establish the supremacy of the church as interpreted by Bishops and Archbishops of his choice.

As the acts of gross usurpation and tyranny grew, the emigration to New England increased.

In 1628 John Endicott of Dorchester, England, took a company to Salem (or Peace). The Plymouth Company, whose charter was supposed to have been annulled, granted a strip of land between the Charles and Merrimac rivers, stretching westward without limit, and Charles I incorporated the Company by Royal grant under the name of "Massachusetts Bay."

1629-1630 were the darkest days in history for the "Puritans" and "Separatists." The king had elevated a narrow mind bigot (whose head came off later) to the office of Bishop and afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury; to carry into effect the "boiling zeal" of this monarch against the "Puritans" and "Separatists" he by royal sanction organized a court composed of the tools of the King and Archbishop. They were granted power, or assumed it, to imprison, scourge, murder, hang, quarter and draw those who were accused rightfully or wrongfully with being either "non-conformist," "Puritan" or "Separatist"; armed with this extraordinary power they proceeded to dispose of their hated victims.

John Winthrop, a man of singularly refined nature, judge of a London court, becoming alarmed at the evil tendency of the times, in 1630 took a colony of about one thousand persons of both sexes—some domestic animals, money and provisions, to America: they reached Massachusetts Bay and located in smaller groups in Watertown, Dorchester and Dedham. Winthrop was a man of fine character and habits with only one vice, which was a strong belief in the divine right of the "classes" to govern the "masses."

The church established by this settlement was the center of all temporal and spiritual interests of the colony; only those upon whom the pastor and governor saw fit to confer the rights of a "freeman" might participate in the conduct of its affairs which related to the whole body of citizens; and those selected as magistrates and members of the General Court were those whom the governor and pastor approved. Those who aspired to either office could find favor only as they were willing to execute the wishes of these tyrants in their systems of restraint upon the individual liberty of thought and expressions of the citizens as effectually as it had been in England.

CONNECTICUT COLONY

The colony that lighted its camp fires on the summit of "Sentinel Hill" in the Valley of the Connecticut, June, 1636, was not a part of the Salem or Bay Colonies, but was entirely distinct from either of them.

This colony's great leader, Rev. Thomas Hooker, was a graduate of and a teacher in Emanuel College, Cambridge. He was a moderate "Puritan" in faith and the greatest preacher and statesman of his time. In 1629-30 he was preaching in a private chapel in Exetershire at "Braintree" to throngs of people that flocked to his parish to hear him. He was a man marked by Charles I and Archbishop Laud for treatment at the hands of their Ecclesiastical Court. To avoid the blow aimed at his life he secretly went to Holland and taught and preached at Antwerp, where he was engaged to write the preface to a book written by Archbishop Ames of the Roman church. He did his work so well that Charles I, then in alliance with the Duke of Orange in resisting the claims of his Catholic Majesty, Phillip II of Spain, demanded that Hooker be extradited to England for trial before Laud's Ecclesiastical Court for heresy. The Duke of Orange was reluctantly compelled to grant Charles I's claim.

Rev. Thomas Hooker, then in exile in Holland, voluntarily returned to England to prevent being extradited for trial; he remained in concealment a short time, awaiting an opportunity to escape to America.

In July, 1633, he took passage at Downs, on the ship "Griffin" for the New World.

John Haynes, and Rev. John Cotton, the former afterwards governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, in 1635 and deputy governor in 1636, and the latter the most forceful of the early New England divines, sailed for Boston, reaching there in September of that year.

Rev. Thomas Hooker, while in exile in Holland, saw the impending blow which was preparing for him for some time prior to 1633; he had corresponded with many of his old parishioners and friends at "Braintree," and they had prepared to remove to the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

Prior to their departure they had sent a few trusted friends as advance agents to look up a site for their future homes, and to clear up portions of the land and erect a church preparatory to their arrival. The general court of the Bay Colony had granted them the land embraced in "Newtown" (now Cambridge) ; here their agents had erected as early as 1632 a little church, which later was furnished with a bell. Rev. Thomas Hooker, their future minister, in boarding the ship "Griffin" at Downs, was in disguise amongst his own people, about one hundred in number of both sexes. This band of emigrants were all from the thrifty middle classes of English society, above any of the previous colonists who had settled, in education and wealth and general acquirements.

Hooker brought with him his college friend "William Stone." They were both installed, the first as pastor and the second as teacher in the Newtown church, on October 11th, 1633, and here in Newtown (Cambridge) the Colony cleared their lands, erected fortifications and stockades, built houses, established schools and carried forward the incipient steps of an organized town, by appointing constables, magistrates, fence viewers, and tax gatherers, and established pounds, organized militia, drilled and disciplined the organized military companies, established sentinels and mounted guards to defend the colonists.

Thomas Hooker at once became a commanding personality in the New England plantations and divided honors with Rev. John Cotton of the Bay Colony and Rev. Roger Williams of the Salem Colony, all star men of equal magnitude in the constellation of the great men in New England.

The Massachusetts Bay Colony under the paternal government of Winthrop and Dudley was bearing legitimate fruits; the whole colony was in a state bordering on anarchy; rank business and religious dissenters had gone from bad to worse and every man's hand had been moved by hatred to clutch the throat of his neighbor if he differed in opinion with him: these dissensions were rife when Hooker's "Braintree" Company arrived in Boston, and these evils rapidly grew worse till the spring of 1636. Rev. Roger Williams, a logically conservative man, who advocated the doctrine that no man should be obliged to pay taxes to support a ministry; held that magistrates had no right to punish Sabbath breaking or blasphemy, and that a man is responsible for his opinions only to God and his own conscience. He contended that the King could not grant them lands, because they were not his to grant; revolutionary heresies like these were not to be tolerated by Winthrop.

Williams was banished in mid-winter from the Colony and later founded the State of Rhode Island. Mrs. Anne Hutchinson, a well educated, refined woman, was likewise banished from the Bay Colony in mid-winter. Her sins, if sins they were, seemed to be in placing too much emphasis on "grace" and "good works" and too little on "faith."

Governor Dudley was in litigation with Governor Winthrop on a breach of an agreement to locate the government of the Colony in Newtown, where Dudley with his usual greed had bought up a large tract of land in order to get the increased value due to the location of the seat of government at Newtown. The case was settled by Winthrop giving Dudley a "dressed pig."

Charles I was moved to revoke the charter of the Bay Colony.

In the early part of the year 1636 a request was made by the Newtown settlers of the Hooker Company for permission to move to the Connecticut Valley, on the plea that they needed more land for their stock; this application was refused by the general court.

The disordered condition of the affairs of the Bay and Salem Colonies was such that the Newtown (Baintree) Company closed an agreement to sell all of their landed property in Newtown to a new Colony which had lately landed under the leadership of Mr. Shepherd, who became shortly one of the founders of Harvard College.

The Hooker party thus relieved by the sale of their lands, which included most, if not all, of the land in Newtown, were, as they thought, free to take up their journey into the Valley of the Connecticut beyond the territory embraced in the Royal grant to the Bay Company.

This move had been secretly anticipated for some time prior to its occurrence.

The trusted agents of the church and company, William Stone and William Goodwin, had previously negotiated and taken title to a strip of land from the Indians in the Valley of the Connecticut, which extended from Windsor to Wethersfield on both sides of the Great River, about eleven miles east and west in the valley. No efforts had been made to occupy any part of this land by the Hooker company prior to June, 1636.

This point of land at the junction of the Little with the Great River, where this band of settlers lighted their camp fires, was then in possession of "Dutch" traders from New Amsterdam (New York). This band of traders had erected a small fort and had a couple of small cannon and were on friendly terms with the minor tribes of Algonquin Indians of the Mohegan family then living in great numbers near the Dutch trading fort.

A fort had been erected at the mouth of the Connecticut River by the Massachusetts Bay Colony which cut the Dutch traders off from intercourse with New Amsterdam, and shortly after the settlement of the English in the Connecticut Valley, the Dutch traders disappeared.

The weary campers on "Sentinel Hill" in the early days of June, 1636, were impelled to take this heroic step for two main reasons: first, to escape the anarchy existing in the Bay Colony, in which they never participated, and second, to locate their homes outside of the jurisdiction of the Bay Colony's Royal Grant.

The sound mind of Rev. Thomas Hooker under the guiding spirit of Divine Providence led this band of heroes into a better land than they knew. No body of emigrants to any country were ever blessed with an abler or wiser leader than Hooker, a scholar, preacher, orator and statesman who has failed to receive the full share of credit with those public benefactors who conceived and put in practical form our democratic institutions.

The final analysis of Anglo-Saxon history will we are sure accord to Thomas Hooker and Oliver Cromwell the first places in our history as the two men who in the arduous field of things accomplished, gave a new impetus to liberty and did most to enlarge the liberties of the English speaking race. Their lives and labors mark a new and distinct epoch in history.

In this epoch is to be found the germ of democratic institutions, when government was first wrested from the hands of the "classes" and, forever, we hope, placed in the keeping of the "masses." Here the subject grows, the fight is still on. Let no one rest with the idea that we are safe; "Eternal Vigilance is the price of Liberty" and will be ever to the end of time. The band of sturdy warriors must ever be recruited from the worthy men and women who are prepared for the conflict.

We have said this much in order that you might form a just conception of the inestimable value of the life and character of the men and women composing the Colony that lighted their campfires in the early days of June, 1636, on "Sentinel Hill" in Hartford, and who there formed the sturdy Commonwealth of Connecticut, and who gave not only to America, but to the world the first written form of federated constitutional government in history, and secured to their posterity the inestimable blessings of liberty under written laws, made by the people and for the people.

RICHARD RISLEY

Richard Risley was with this Hooker Company. We, his descendants, gather in this church to-day to do honor to his name and memory, and to inspire in the hearts of thousands of his descendants a just pride, and to kindle in their hearts a more just and lasting appreciation of the wealth of our inheritance. We are thrice fortunate that through his efforts and self-denial we can justly claim to have our inheritance with those that created the germ of constitutional government, guided and controlled by laws made by the people and for the people, by which alone liberty can be secured and perpetuated to those who may come after.

To Thomas Hooker without doubt belongs the credit of framing the first confederated constitutional form of government known to history, and to this band of emigrants the first to adopt and practice its precepts.

Richard Risley, of Hartford, the founder of the name in America, was a lineal descendant from a long line of distinguished men and women in England, most of whose descendants have continued to live in our beautiful home country, England. The early history of our English Ancestry is shrouded in more or less obscurity. Their early home, without doubt, was in Norway. They emigrated into Normandy, France, thence with "William the Conqueror" or at later time found their way with this warrior, statesman and prince, into England, where the Crown was wrested from "Harold," last of the Danish Monarchs, and placed on the head of this renowned prince, who became King of England.

To those deeply interested in genealogical research, no field of investigation is more enticing or yields so much pleasure as that of looking up our family history in the Mother Country.

The Risleys in England are numerous. The first record of the Risley name is in the eleventh century. At least one estate is now intact and in the possession of a Risley.

The place and time where Richard was born is not known, nor has his connection with the English family been distinctly traced, but there is no doubt that he was a descendant of some one of several English families whose name he bore. The evidence seems to point to his connection with the Oxford or Lancastershire families. It may be assumed, I think, that Richard had come under the influence of the preaching of Rev. Thomas Hooker in "Braintree" and formed a component part of the "Hooker Company" that sailed in the ship Griffin from Downs July, 1633.

The coat of arms printed at the head of the invitations to this gathering belongs to the Oxford and Lancaster Risleys. That the different branches of the family in England all spring from one source, cannot, I think, be doubted.

The name "Risley" has not been found in the Newtown records or in any Massachusetts early history. The first appearance of the name in New England is found in the Hartford town records on page twelve, under date of "September, 1639," where it is recorded "of ye owld townesmans years Restly behind for 2 rates 00 05 9."

This entry shows that "Restly" had failed to pay his taxes to the town for the years 1637-1638.

The second appearance of the name in the early Hartford records will be found on page 57 of the division of land amongst the early settlers composing the Hooker Company, entered under date of January 14, 1639, where the record enters the name "Richard Wrisley." On Porter's map of the allotment of lands in Hartford (city in 1640) "Richard Risley" was allotted about two acres, about the same quantity allotted to the other settlers, and is lot No. 131, on the road leading from "Steele's Mill" to the "Great Swamp."

The land division between the settlers, the record of which appears in 1640, was located in the central portion of what is now the center of the City of Hartford.

Richard was probably not married until about 1639-40 and the name of his wife is unknown.

The colony after its settlement in Hartford erected a small church on Main Street in the vicinity of the present "First Church" of Hartford. Richard's home lot was located south of Little River, on the road from "Steele's Mill" to the "Great Swamp" where the highway makes an obtuse angle.

The entire colony during the first few years was daily and nightly in deadly peril; within a radius of a score of miles of their camp were several thousand Indians of the Algonquin nation who were then friendly to the settlers, because they were in fear of the fierce Iroquois to whom they were under tribute, which remained unpaid for some time; the white men in their location were a buffer between these warring Indian nations and by being friendly with the whites they would secure their protection and aid. The friendly Algonquins were possessed of great curiosity and a malicious spirit, that under small provocation might lead them to go on the war path at any moment. The settlers had to guard their homes night and day and tether their herds at night. They carried their guns with them everywhere, to church as well as into the fields and forests. They treated these Indian neighbors with scrupulous honor in every way, to avoid their enmity. The settlers reached the valley too late in the season to clear the forest land and plant and harvest a crop that season. They subsisted mainly on provisions brought with them or secured from the Indians in barter and by hunting and fishing. Their first effort was to erect log houses and prepare for the coming winter.

PEQUOT WAR

The spring of 1637 ushered in the horrors of an Indian war. The Pequots killed a number of white settlers in Wethersfield, carried two young women into captivity, killed the settlers' cattle and burned their log houses, inaugurating a reign of terror in the colonies. Historians fail to account for this burst of savage rage, but the real cause of the outbreak was due to the disordered condition of public affairs in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. The Valley colonies were not left free to settle these grievances, but were forced to take up arms against the Pequots. The Hartford Colony furnished forty-two soldiers, Windsor thirty-six, Wethersfield eighteen; this body of soldiers was joined by twenty more from the Massachusetts Bay Colony under command of Captain Underhill. The whole body of troops was placed under command of Major John Mason, a thorough soldier, who had fought in the English army in the lowlands of Holland under Lord Thomas Fairfax. The troops were accompanied by a few cowardly Indians who rendered no assistance in the engagements which followed. The troops proceeded to the Pequot camp on the right bank of the Connecticut near its mouth, where they were entrenched by stockades. A fierce battle ensued which resulted in killing six hundred men, women and children. Only five or six of the Pequot warriors escaped and these were followed into the Hudson River Valley where they were captured and killed. The colonial soldiers returned to their homes rejoicing that the war was over. This war prevented the planting and raising:

of crops in the summer of 1637 to meet the needs of the coming winter.

During the winter of 1637-38 starvation was in every household in the colony, the death rate was more than forty per cent. of the population; hunger and disorder, then as now, went hand in hand; the strong took from the weak and the whole colony was brought to the verge of ruin and were only relieved by the friendly aid rendered by neighboring Indians and a shipment of corn from the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

This deplorable condition of affairs made the colonists realize the necessity for some form of government. It was at this time Rev. Thomas Hooker preached the sermon from Deuteronomy 1st chapter, 13th verse, which contained a true prophecy for the future and inspired the first written constitution known to history.

This "fundamental order" was adopted by popular vote in Hooker's church January 14th, 1638 (O. S.). Our ancestor, Richard Risley, was of the voting age then and was a participant in the adoption of this constitution.

At some time prior to 1648, Richard established his home within the present bounds of East Hartford, east of the Great River. The exact location is unknown, but it was probably adjacent to the river below the ford across Hockanum river near the point where it enters the Connecticut.

In October, 1648, Richard died in Hockanum, without a will, survived by a wife and three children. An inventory of his estate will be found in the Colonial Probate Records, where under date December 7th, 1648, his inventory was filed under the name "Richard Risley." According to this his estate amounted to £135 5s. 16d.

In the decree settling his estate the following is recorded: "There are three children, viz. One daughter by name Sarah Risley between 7 and 8 years, one sonne by name Samuel Risley about 2 years old, and one sonne by name Richard Risley about three months old."

The Decree of Distribution of his estate entered in the Probate records on December 7th, 1648, is as follows: "To the children £16 apiece to be paid to the daughter at the age of 18 years, and to the sonnes at the age of 21 years, Will. Hill bringing them up to write and read and giving security to the Court for the payment of the several childrens portions."

If the record stopped here, it would indicate that Richard's wife died prior to his decease, but there is a record of a conveyance of lands made in Farmington by William Hill (Hills) by virtue of his marital relation with the "relict" of "Richard Risley."

The fact stated in the decree of distribution that Will. Hill gave bonds to bring up the children to "write and read" and gave security for the performance of these conditions would indicate that he married or expected to marry the widow very near the time this decree was entered. It is fair to assume that the three children were brought up in the family of Will. Hill and that the "relict" of Richard Risley became Hill's second wife.

William Hill, sr. (second husband of Mrs. Risley), died July, 1683, leaving an estate £274 60s. 2d. At the time of his death or at least at the time of the execution of the will, Feb. 22, 1680-1, he describes himself as William Hills of Hockanum within the township of Hartford. By his will he makes Jonathan, his eldest son, his executor and imposed obligations upon his wife "Mary Hills" which indicates that Mary (Risley) Hills was living at the date of his death. The children mentioned in his will are Jonathan, Mary, Hannah Hills Kilbourn, Benjamin, Joseph, William, jr., John, Sarah Hills Ward.

William Hills, jr., died in Hockanum prior to the 8th of December, 1693; his will was witnessed by Siborn Nickols, James Steele, sen., Tho. Dickerson. His children were Ebenezer, age 17, John 14, Joseph 10, Mary 26, Files 24 (Phillis), Hannah 21, Esther 12. The will of William Hills, jr., was established by the evidence of Thomas Kilbourn and "Richard Risley, jr., age 45 years." Administration was granted to the "widow." Richard Risley and Sergt. Kilbourn to be overseers.

Richard Risley, jr., son of Richard, sr., lived to be very old. He was alive in 1732. He was born and lived in East Hartford and had a numerous family. He left no will nor are there any proceedings in the Probate Records showing the disposition of his property.

I think it is safe to say from all evidence at hand that the children of Richard Risley, jr., were: John, Samuel, Thomas, Nathaniel, Jonathan, Richard, jr., Jeremiah, Mary and Hannah (Anna or Anner.) The baptismal records of the First Church of Hartford show that Mary was baptised April 23, 1693, and Hannah April 12, 1695.

THE THIRD GENERATION

The third generation of Risleys in Hartford became quite numerous; John was made a freeman and became a fence viewer in Hockanum in 1698, he was rate collector for the First Church of East Hartford for several years and operated a ferry, which took members of the church living east of the Hockanum River to the house of worship, for which the church at different intervals paid him sums of money. His will was probated 1755; the witnesses were Jonathan Hills, Jonathan and Richard Risley; the children named in the will were John, jr., Elizabeth, Anna, Mabel, Thankful, Martha, and Timothy, the latter being named executor. The name of his wife was Mary — maiden name unknown.

Samuel married Rebecca Gaines, August 1st, 1704; he was made a freeman December 23d, 1703, was also elected a fence viewer of Hockanum December 23d, 1703; December 16, 1707; December 16th, 1712. He died in Glastonbury and was interred in the old cemetery. He left a will dated the 9th of May, 1752. In this will his children are named as follows: Samuel, jr., Richard, David, Job, Oliver, Thomas, Rebecca (married Loveland), Ruth (married Hollister), and Sarah. His son Thomas was named as executor.

Thomas, sr., son of Richard, after living in East Hartford, emigrated to Egg Harbor, Gloucester Co., New Jersey, with his brothers Richard, jr., and Jeremiah, and was in New Jersey June, 1726. He left a will dated December 5th, 1740, which was admitted to probate and recorded in the State Department at Trenton, New Jersey, June 4th, 1746. His property was willed to the children of his brother Richard, jr., (3). Thomas died unmarried.

Nathaniel Risley, M. D., died in November, 1742, and was buried in East Hartford. He left a will dated December 8th, 1741, which was probated December 1st, 1742; the witnesses were Jonathan Hills, Josiah Bidwell, and his brother Jonathan Risley. The children named in the will were: Elizabeth, Zerviah, Deborah, who was born 1742 and died December 23d, 1765, aged 23. The maiden name of his wife is unknown.

Jonathan Risley (son of Richard jr.) died August, 1762. He was a freeman of Hartford and had charge of the schools there at different intervals. He left no will. Administration was granted upon his estate to his sons Moses and Nathaniel. The children named in the Probate Proceedings are Moses, Nathaniel, Richard, Joshua and Rebecca (married Caleb Benjamin). Jonathan was twice married.

Richard Risley, jr. (2), son of Richard, jr. (1), married a wife whose name was Esther. He emigrated from Hartford to Egg Harbor, Gloucester Co., New Jersey. He left a will dated May 2d, 1736, which was probated June 26th, 1740, and is recorded in the state department of New Jersey. His children were Richard, jr. (3), Peter, Mary, Jemima, Esther, Sarah and Rebecca.

Jeremiah Risley, born Dec. 14th, 1734; his children are stated to have been as follows: Nathaniel, Millicent, Samuel, Mary, Edward and Sarah. If this birth record is correct, it is believed that the Jeremiah here mentioned was a son of Richard, jr. (3), and not a son of Richard, jr. (2). This record should be taken with some degree of allowance.

Mary Risley, daughter of Richard, jr., was baptised in the First Church August 23d, 1693. She is supposed to have married a great grandson of John Haynes, who was a member of the First Church of East Hartford, November 19th, 1702.

Hannah (Anna or Anner), daughter of Richard, jr. (2), was baptised in the First Church of Hartford April 12, 1695; she married Sergt. James Brainerd, December 23d, 1717, and died May 7th, 1772, aged 77 years. Her children were Benjamin, Jedediah, Rebecca, James, Hannah, Dudley, Ozias, Jonathan and Ozias.

Charles is supposed to be a son of Richard jr. (2). He was a freeman and collector of the First Church of East Hartford in 1710. No further record of him has been found.

The Risleys may fairly lay claim to be among the first resident settlers of East Hartford. Between the years 1749 and 1851 the baptismal records of the first church of East Hartford show that there were baptised into this church 135 people bearing the name Risley. (See diagram of seats.) There were probably an equal number of children baptised whose mothers were Risleys.

There was but little emigration out of Hartford county prior to the revolution; the little that took place was into Ulster Co., New York, and Long Island, New Jersey, the eastern part of Pennsylvania and into Westmoreland Co.

THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR

The military records of the state of Connecticut show that the following named Risleys served either in the militia or troops of the line of the Commonwealth of Connecticut: Elijah, Eli, George, Job, Levi, Richard, jr., Stephen, Timothy, Reuben and Samuel. The following named Risleys served in the Naval service during the Revolution: James, Levi, Richard and Richard, jr.

RISLEY EMIGRATION OUT OF CONNECTICUT

In 1663 there was a William Risley and wife living in Dover, N. H. William's wife was ordered to leave the town, her offence being unknown.

Benjamin Risley, son of Richard^t, moved early to Hanover, N. H., afterwards to Vermont, from there to Saratoga Springs, where in company with his son-in-law, Gideon Putnam, he piped Congress, Washington and Hamilton Springs in the village of Saratoga, and afterwards erected Congress Hall and the Grand Union Hotels. Benjamin moved to Warren, Ohio, where he was buried. He left a number of descendants who are scattered through the Middle and Southwest West.

In 1788, Allen, David and Elijah Risley, sons of Moses, emigrated with their families to the territory embraced in the town of New Hartford, Oneida Co., N. Y., and settled there.

James settled in Jefferson Co., and another of the family went to St. Lawrence Co. My great-grandfather settled in Brookfield, Madison Co., N. Y., in 1792.

There are very few States in the Union that have not among their citizens the name Risley. From the period of time immediately following the revolution to the present, they have been constantly and persistently emigrants crowding on the front verge of civilization.

RISLEY CHARACTERISTICS

It has been my pleasure during the investigation of our family history, covering a period of more than thirty years, to have known several hundred Risleys and their direct and collateral descendants. With a very few exceptions they have been among the best citizens in whatever community they lived; vigorous in their activities, aggressive in disposition, peace lovers and peacemakers, thrifty in their habits of life, devoted to their homes and families, temperate in habits and honorable in all things.

My kinsmen of the eighth, ninth and tenth generations, you are the possessors of a royal heritage, equalled by few and surpassed by none. Your ancestors assisted in blazing the trail from Massachusetts Bay to Connecticut; they here assisted in establishing the first permanent form of constitutional government; they assisted in blazing the trails through the wilderness west, north and south, into every State within our great Republic; they were constructors of many of the highways, canals, railroads, and assisted in building churches, school houses, eleemosynary institutions, and have been lovers and promoters of all that is best in our civilization; they stood with the colonies against the savage Indian warfares, fought with the colonies against the Crown of England from Bunker Hill to Yorktown; they marshalled under the banner of our common country at Lundy's Lane and New Orleans.

The ancestors of our honored guest and kinsman, John E. Risley, were among the pioneers who blazed the trail across the Allegheny into Kentucky and established their homes on the Wabash.

Our kinsmen were on both sides of the great civil struggle from Bull's Run to Appomattox; they were in the conflict at Fredericksburg Heights; they were in the charge at Devil's Den at Gettysburg; they stood with Hancock at the Bloody Angle at Spottsylvania; they were humiliated at Cold Harbor; they assisted in battering down the walls of Sumter.

Numbered among their members are some of the great financiers and statesmen of the country, for who can say that it was not the Risley blood in Russell Sage that made him a potent factor in the active field of finance? They have held the scales of justice upon the bench and have advocated the claims of litigants in court; they stand in the front ranks of the medical profession; their voice is potent in the mechanical, industrial and educational world.

There are no longer trails to be blazed through a new continent; the pent-up energy in the race will in the near future make its influence felt in the wider and more difficult fields of conquests.

After two hundred and seventy-one years of residence in America, they have contributed in the many fields of endeavor to human progress and welfare.

Elijah Risley, jr., was the promoter and active factor in the establishment of the great seed industry of this continent; the promoter in building the New York and Erie Railway across two states; and his honored son continued this enterprise by financing the construction of the Great Lake Shore System of railroads which open up the arteries of traffic between the seaboard and the middle West, and their kinsman Russell Sage has continued this artery of traffic through to the Pacific Slope.

THE FIRST WRITTEN CONSTITUTION.

PROFESSOR OF HISTORY IN COLGATE UNIVERSITY, N. Y.

Travelers neglect their own Niagara and the Yosemite for the Rhine and Alps of distant scene. Just so historians have studied foreign dynasties and customs to the neglect of local institutions and origins. But now there is a revival in history purely local and American. There have been two pioneers in this field, Francis Parkman and John Fiske, as unlike in style and treatment as in physical characteristics, yet alike in the prime respect, fidelity to things American. F. J. Turner and R. S. Thwaites of the middle west are later apostles of this same creed.

To John Fiske is due that no knowledge of local government in this country is complete without recognition of the town meeting, and to this great pioneer in history may also be credited the apotheosis of Massachusetts. For the Massachusetts town meeting is always used as a model. In his later works he gave tardy recognition to the worth of Connecticut as a model, and was directing his clear vision to the importance of the early institutions of that state. If we follow in his footsteps we cannot roam far afield. (Historical Essays, II, John Fiske.)

It is a twice-told tale to relate that the New England colonies were settled by church congregations. It follows, therefore, as day follows the dawn that the colonial minister, as director of the congregation, was not only spiritual adviser but the greatest man in the community, both social luminary and political genius, in short, adviser in chief to his majesty the American citizen in embryo. Hartford, Connecticut, was blessed with one of the greatest of these God-given directors. For Thomas Hooker, massive, stately, judicious, cast out of an English pulpit by Laud, after various vicissitudes, had assisted in founding Hartford and the self-governing commonwealth of Connecticut, a community that seemed to the people of Boston so close to the western verge of the world that the last great conflict with anti-Christ would certainly take place there. Thomas Hooker so stamped Hartford and the Commonwealth of Connecticut with his personality that it is a matter of interest to know more about him.

How did his contemporaries regard him? Edward Johnson knew him, says Moses Coit Tyler (American Literature, Moses Coit Tyler), and while in his history of New England he styled John Cotton as "the reverend and much desired" and speaks of the "rhetorical Mr. Stone" and also "the holy, heavenly, sweet affecting, and soul nourishing minister Mr. Shepard," he reserved for Mr. Hooker his most temperate admiration, styling him "the grave, godly and judicious Hooker." In the living presence of Hooker there appears to have been some singular personal force, an air both of saintliness and kingliness, that lofty and invincible moral genius which the Hebrew prophets had, and with which they captivated or smote down human resistance. Even during his lifetime and shortly afterward, there gathered about him the halo of spiritual mystery, a sort of supernatural prestige, anecdotes of weird achievement that in a darker age would have blossomed into frank and vivid legends of miraculous power. In his youth there was noticed in him "a grandeur of mind" that marked him out for something uncommon. As he came into manhood his person and bearing partook of peculiar majesty; the imperial dignity of his office made him imperial: "He was a person," they said, "who when doing his Master's work would put a king into his pocket." People seeing how fiery was his temper, marvelled at his perfect command of it; he governed as a man governs a mastiff with a chain; "he could let out his dog," they said, "and pull in his dog as he pleased." As he ruled himself, so he ruled other men, easily; they felt his right to command them. In his school, a word or a look from him was all the discipline that was needed. His real throne was the pulpit.

There he swayed men with a power that was more than regal. His face had authority and utterance in it; his voice was rich, of great compass and flexibility; every motion spoke. The impressiveness of his preaching began in his vivacity; he flashed life into any subject no matter how dead before. He so grappled the minds of his hearers that they could not get away from him. While he preached at Chelmsford an ungodly person once said to his companion, "Come, let us go hear what the bawling Hooker will say to us." The mocker went, but he was no longer a mocker; Hooker had that to say to him which subdued him; he became a penitent and devout man and followed his conqueror to America. Once Hooker was to preach in the great church at Leicester. A leading burgess of the town, hating the preacher and thinking to suppress him, hired fiddlers to stand near the church door and fiddle while Hooker should preach; but somehow Hooker's exhortations were mightier and more musical than the fiddlers' fiddling. The burgess, astonished at such power, then went nearer to the door to hear for himself what sort of talking that was which kept people from noticing his fiddlers; soon even he was clutched by the magnetism of the orator, sucked in through the door in spite of himself, smitten down by stroke after stroke of eloquent truth, and converted.

Such was the man who preached to the Hartford congregation. He had a copious and racy vocabulary, an aptitude for strong verbal combinations; dramatic spirit; the gift of translating arguments into pictures; cumulative energy; oratorical verve. This orator is dead; his words are living. Note simply a sentence from one of his famous sermons. I don't know how long this particular discourse was. John Winthrop mentions another sermon preached at Cambridge when Mr. Hooker was ill; he at first proceeded for fifteen minutes, then stopped and rested half an hour, then resumed and preached two hours. Of course, this was not the best he could do, for he was ill at the time. This remarkable sermon we want to notice was a political tract and contained one sentence that must have rung in the ears of his hearers. After he had refuted John Cotton's idea that democracy had no Scriptural foundation, and that kings were natural rulers, he thundered out: "The foundation of authority is laid in the consent of the people." It was this sermon whose spirit is breathed in this sentence that stirred his hearers to the formation of that first written constitution to form a real government; the Fundamental Orders of Connecticut. "It is on the banks of the Connecticut under the mighty preaching of Thomas Hooker, and in the constitution to which he gave life, if not form, that we draw the first breath of that atmosphere which is now so familiar to us. The birthplace of American democracy is Hartford." Ambassador Bryce, famous for his American Commonwealth and his comprehensive essay on The Holy Roman Empire, says of the Fundamental Orders: "The first truly political written constitution." Certainly there was in this early Connecticut form of government no humble mention of King. Moreover, it provided for a custom whose importance to American institutions developed later. Article eight of these Fundamental Orders reads: "It is ordered and decreed that Windsor, Hartford and Wethersfield, shall have power, each town to send four of their freeman as their deputies to every general Court; that whatsoever other towns shall be hereafter added to this jurisdiction shall send a reasonable proportion of the number of freeman that are in said town." Note carefully that provision. While the document provides in another place for the election of Governor and magistrates by plurality vote of all inhabitants of all the towns, in this eighth article the importance of the three towns is completely recognized by allowing each town regarded as a community to send four deputies to represent it.

This is not the first colonial instance of representation by towns. The Watertown Protest had secured it a half dozen years before in Massachusetts; hence Connecticut, a dissenting fragment of the Bay State, used a means to which her people were fairly well accustomed. The novelty of it lay in its unqualified acceptance by fixing it as a rigid institution in her written constitution.

This event of 1639 is isolated in the world's history of that epoch. It stands by itself as a golden achievement of a people thrust back by hardship into the pioneer conditions of a primeval ancestry; reverting to the ideas of their Teutonic forebears, they raised into world prominence that democratic government made familiar in German forests when the clang of spear and shield rang out the assent of a gathered community. Yet the formation of this first written constitution was not a reversion to a former type. It was another stride in the progress of that democratic spirit, which has always marked the Teutonic race, whether in gloomy German grove; in the shire-mote of Alfred, England's "morning star;" in the shout of barons at Runnymede when Magna Charta was wrested from groaning and cursing John Lackland; in England's model parliament at the end of the thirteenth century; in the uprising of Wat Tyler and of Jack Cade; in the hundred years' war when the sturdy yeoman with his long bow twanged at Crecy and at Poitiers the death knell of the feudal knight; in the struggle of the seventeenth century in England.

But though its roots are grounded deep in the character of a people, the triumph of democracy in the Fundamental Orders was no less an isolated event. For what does 1639 mean in the world's history? Spain had already promenaded her weakness in the defeat of her so-called Invincible Armada. Italy was both the ambition and the grave of France and Germany. France was building that wonderful royal power, a centralization to concentrate in Louis XIV's masterful "I am the state." In France popular will was represented only in the States General that met in 1614 and then rested till one hundred and seventy-five years had rolled away. While common consent was regulating government in Connecticut, France was erecting a magnificent royal structure on a volcano of popular disapproval, that was to burst into destructive flame five generations later. Germany was determining to settle its religious question which Martin Luther had raised a century before, and not till ten years after the Fundamental Orders did the Peace of Westphalia produce a measure of toleration and give Germany a breathing space, with time to recuperate from the horrors of a Thirty Years' War, a war which had pushed her generations behind in achievement. Germany had been a camping ground of nations for more than a score of years. That soldier of fortune, Wallenstein, had preyed on her. Four years before our ancestors had listened to Thomas Hooker and had voted for Connecticut's and the world's first constitution, Gustavus Adolphus had died at Lutzen and verily the "Snow King of the North" had melted on his southern journey. In the mother country, England, Charles I, aping his father, the first James, "the wisest fool in Christendom," was testing to the uttermost the divine right of kings to rule. Ten years after the Fundamental Orders, dynasties shuddered as Charles I's head rolled from the block and the experiment began under Cromwell, of the divine right of the people to rule. But both ideas were extreme. The Stuart Restoration followed in 1660 and the Merry Monarch who never said a foolish thing and never did a wise one, plunged England into twenty-five years of trouble. Spain, France, Germany, England make a sad background, but its melancholy brings out into glorious relief this deed of the Hartford pioneers. Even though we may not be intensely interested in a review of the world's history at or about the time when the Fundamental Orders were adopted, yet it is of paramount interest to us at present to know that when the Rev. Thomas Hooker was inspiring his audience with a desire for a government lodged in the consent of the people, amid the audience that listened breathlessly to his thunderings, sat our common ancestor, Richard Risley. No less interesting is it to note that in the list of those illustrious names that voted for the first constitution to make a government we find written "Richard Risley."

This action of a few Connecticut pioneers has influenced our national government. There came a time when men were needed with just the training that Connecticut institutions gave. A National Convention had been called in order that some kind of organic law might be drafted. The pressure of events had gradually urged the colonists together until the need of union became apparent. This need had been felt before. As early as 1643 New England had her plan of confederacy. About a century later, Franklin proposed what was known as the Albany

Plan of Union. The French and Indian war disclosed their separate weakness, a lesson well learned. Committees of correspondence had done their work. Patrick Henry's speech on the Parson's Cause had declared ideas common to many. But yet when Patrick Henry said later, "I am not a Virginian, I am an American," he was putting aside love for his own native state, and voicing national sentiment felt by few and absent from his own declining years. Even in the Federal Convention Gouverneur Morris found that the states had many representatives on the floor; few he feared were to be deemed the representatives of America. In fact the sentiment of particularism was much stronger than that of nationalism. Even the day before the important battle of Trenton a number of Washington's troops marched away because their time of service had expired. It was natural enough; that long narrow coast line hardly two hundred miles wide at its widest point, extending northeast and southwest along the Atlantic seaboard, with its defective means of communication and the consequent unfamiliarity between sections was not conducive to a sentiment of union. In fact the reason for the calling of the convention of 1787 was commercial jealousy between states. Called to remedy trouble between states, and composed of men from widely different sections of the country, it is not strange that this convention was marked by discussion and indecision. It seemed impossible to come to a conclusion even upon the simplest question. On Thursday, June 28, 1787, the venerable Dr. Benjamin Franklin rose feebly and said in part: "Mr. President, the small progress we have made, after four or five weeks of close attendance and continued reasoning with each other, is, methinks, a melancholy proof of the imperfection of the human understanding. Groping in the dark to find political truth and scarce able to distinguish it when presented to us, how has it happened, Sir, that we have not once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understandings? I have lived a long time and the longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth 'That God Governs in the affairs of Men.' " (Eliot's Debates, V. Supplement, Madison Papers, for reference here and later.) Therefore the good old diplomat moved that the clergy of the city be invited to open deliberations with prayer. Connecticut rose to the situation and the motion was seconded by Mr. Sherman, who together with Dr. Johnson and Oliver Ellsworth formed the Connecticut delegation. Was this motion carried unanimously and without discussion? Mr. Madison, in his notes on the Federal Convention, gives a totally different idea, for Alexander Hamilton and several others express their apprehension that such a motion might be misunderstood by those outside the convention hall, and instead of agreeing to this harmless proposition of Dr. Franklin's the convention adjourned for the day without taking action upon it. This is not an example of the irreligion of the period, nor of the backsliding of these particular men of the convention. But this little side glimpse does make us wonder how any motion could be passed and particularly, how the convention could settle that question, to which it gave the great part of its consideration, namely, the adjustment of differences between the large and small states. This was the rock on which the convention almost split. If there ever was any need for prayer, for calm deliberation, for cool judgment and sane decision, it was whenever the thoughts of rivalry between large and small states filled the minds of the delegates, and this it must be said, was during no small part of the meeting. It was on the 28th of June that Dr. Franklin's motion failed of passage. What conferences had the Connecticut delegates held, what midnight sessions? From this time on, these three delegates worked together for common end—compromise between the large and small states.

It was tacitly agreed that Congress should be composed of two houses, but membership in these houses was a problem apparently capable of many different solutions. On Friday, June 29th, the day following Dr. Franklin's salutary motion, Dr. Johnson of Connecticut opened the convention with a statement of the compromise that covered the situation and ended by saying, "In one branch the people ought to be represented, in the other the States." (Eliot's Debates, V, p. 255.) How simple a solution! Anyone could have said that. Why grant special praise to Connecticut or her institutions that brought up men with such an idea? Then forget that Alexander cut the Gordian Knot; it was so simple that anyone could have done it, a mere slash of the sword. Columbus stood the egg upright by lightly crushing one end. Solutions are always simple when you know how. The hardest thing to do is the simple right thing at the right time. And this was what Connecticut did. But she could not have suggested an easy road around an apparently insuperable obstacle, if she had not had behind her the Fundamental Orders and the training they gave in the compromise form of government. This is the importance of the eighth article of the Fundamental Orders. A people used to the double relation of people as a whole on the one hand, with towns as a community on the other, were trained rightly to suggest a compromise between the people of the nation on the one hand, and the states on the other. Thus the Federal idea, which in Connecticut was wisely mixed with the popular idea, was retained in the constitution. On this same day, Mr. Ellsworth of Connecticut moved that, "the rule of suffrage in the second branch be the same with that established by the articles of confederation" (Eliot's Debates, V, p. 260), which, interpreted, means that there be equal state representation in the senate. Was there objection to this plan or did this wonderful compromise settle all difficulties? Gunning Bedford, of Delaware, a small state then, as always, contended that there was no middle way between a perfect consolidation and a mere confederacy of states. In conclusion he says, "we have been told with a dictatorial air that this is the last moment for a fair trial in favor of a good government." It will be the last indeed, if the propositions reported from the committee go forth to the people. He was under no apprehension. The large states dare not dissolve the Confederation. If they do, the small ones will find some foreign ally, of more honor and good faith, who will take them by the hand and do them justice." But Ellsworth rises and pours oil on the troubled waters. Not only had divers kinds of plans been proposed for membership and qualifications in the two houses, but finally, when the Connecticut idea obtained and the compromise bridge was built, Mr. Madison summed up the objections against the equality of votes in the senate, notwithstanding the proportional representation in the house of representatives. They are so purely theoretical and show so clearly the dangers imagined by these most astute men that I quote:

“ I. The minority could negative the will of the majority of the people.

“ II. They could extort measures by making them the consideration of their assent to other necessary measures.

“ III. They could obtrude measures on the majority, by virtue of the peculiar powers which would be vested in the senate.

“ IV. The evil instead of being cured by time, would increase with every new state that should be admitted, as they must all be admitted on the principle of equality.

“ V. The perpetuity it would give to the preponderance of the northern against the southern scale was a serious consideration.”

On the 16th of July, the famous compromise, the Connecticut Compromise now styled, born of the Connecticut idea, was passed. It has lately become the style to omit the qualification “Connecticut” from accounts of this compromise. Mr. McLaughlin, in his Confederation and Constitution, does this, but includes the name in the index. I am not ready to abandon it. The name not only shows the origin in the early law of Connecticut, and in the practice of its later state constitution, but it raises a fitting memorial to the labors of Connecticut’s trio in the Federal Convention. The records of the proceedings of this Convention are meagre enough, and we are largely dependent for our knowledge on the account of Mr. Madison, an opponent to the compromise, but even here the influence of the Connecticut delegation is most apparent.

Their work fairly shouts for recognition. Cleverly, tactfully, a speech here, a motion there, they opposed the two giants of the Convention, Madison and Wilson, against their opposition securing on motion by Mr. Sherman the reference of the whole matter to a grand committee. Neither of the two opponents was on this committee, which reported the compromise that was adopted. No chronicler states in so many words the influence of the Connecticut statesmen, but the policy adopted was their policy, fought for in the open and gained in clear parliamentary battle. The influence of an obscure continental geographer is considered to be decisive respecting the name of America, but the progressive weight of a century and a half of state practice and of the state's delegates in the convention is calmly ignored to-day. The name of Connecticut should still be prefixed to the compromise.

In conclusion, a few facts in later American development will show how strikingly important was the adoption of a state's rights compromise, for even, after the adoption of the Constitution in 1789, the idea of particularism, of state against state, of section against section, as opposed to the more lofty idea of nationalism or union, gives proof of its root in American soil. Nullification was breathed in both north and south; in 1798 in the Virginia and Kentucky resolutions, in 1814 when the Hartford convention made itself ridiculous by objections that were, fortunately, too late to have any weight. The Webster-Hayne debate in 1830, opened on the question of land, but inevitably developed into a memorable discussion of states' rights. In fact it was a problem of such deadly importance, that no nullification, no debate, no threats of secession could settle it, nothing short of the sorrow and reality of civil war. But surely the compromise was a clear-sighted step in the right direction. The question is now so far a dead issue that election of state senators by the people has been suggested, is accomplished through primary laws, and has even been advocated as part of a political platform by one of the two great parties of the country. Notice that the main objection to such popular election is not that the states will lose representation; in fact, when such argument is presented, a complete historical preface is necessary in order that an audience may understand the argument.

We have seen the importance of the principles of the Fundamental Orders of Connecticut when applied to the solution of national difficulties. Naturally, one wonders what value there is in a constitution drawn up in a period of such stress and strain. It is hard for a contemporary to judge the comparative value of its own institutions. I shall not attempt to decide what the adoption of the constitution means to us now. That it lived during the first ten years is, to my mind, the greatest proof of its powerful vitality. That a document drawn up for a few people, is fitted for an immense people, seems strange, but it is proving itself yearly, at the same time showing the wisdom of those illustrious framers of the constitution.

The national troubles of to-day, are present, insistent, serious. But in the solution of all such problems, the element of time is all important. The Constitutional Convention of 1787, with its compromise constitution, placed the United States nearly one hundred years of time ahead of other nations. What this means to our generation may be adduced from a slight consideration of the time element in countries other than our own. Among other nations the Spain of to-day is hardly a factor; her course has been downward from 1588 and before, till the decisive defeat of ten years ago. Turkey is still sick; 1856 and 1878, Crimea and Berlin have not been potent remedies. China is a bone of contention. Russia is big and spectacular, from the dress reforms of Peter the Great to the chimerical dream of universal rule by Christian pretensions, voiced in the Holy Alliance of 1815, a dream that found its awakening in the reactionary policy of that evil genius, Metternich; Russia is an overgrown boy, huge with pretensions, delighting in emancipation of serf and Red Cross reform, as well as in that other later dream of universal disarmament. But the boy grinds down Finland, justifies himself in it, and has only lately destroyed the censor's blue pencil. We gave up this censorship of the press shortly after our alien and sedition laws of 1798. Russia's progress is too jerky to arrive in time. Japan, slow but adaptive, will bear watching. Italy carries her future in her own hands, but it was not till 1870, when the French troops abandoned Rome, and the temporal sovereignty of the Pope, dating back as far as 754, was given up, that Italy could face the world with a united front. The reckless courage of a Garibaldi and the prudent diplomacy of a Cavour are fair to look upon, but 1870 is a far cry from 1789. And 1870 is almost the common continental starting point. Not till then did the blood and iron of Bismarck unite Germany under the headship of Prussia and give to the two hundred and more sovereign states, laden with the heavy legacy of the past, the coveted opportunity of a united Germany. Austria, thrust out of the union by the six weeks' defeat of 1866, has a vast task imposed on her by her composite, disjointed population and by the other half of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. 1870 also witnessed the third attempt at a republic in France within a century. Events of the last few years show us that her army is a menace to the institutions of France. Only lately is the church question arriving at a doubtful settlement. What of England? We have always been fighting England's battles. In spite of the Townshend and the Quebec Act and the Repressive Acts, the colonies stood firmly for representation, and thus fought for what England's better judgment approved and approves to this day. England's political progress during the nineteenth century has been along the line of representation for the masses, and not till 1884, after previous partial successes, was the whole desire of her people gratified. When we fought the battles of the Revolution we were fighting battles of England's better judgment against a king and a majority that did not represent her. Future years will reveal to us, who see dimly now, the paramount advantage of this start of a century in political practice. Do these facts become wearisome? Then why review them? Because I believe Benjamin Franklin was right when he said, "God rules in the affairs of men," and, further, that God's rule is not capricious. There is a line of progress discernible in every nation, and that line is constant. We began early with the Fundamental Orders of Connecticut and are still pushing on.

And just because I believe all this and because I am proud that Richard Risley sat in the assembly, which aided so greatly in giving us a right start, do I want other Risleys to contribute to the sanity, and aid in the progress of our great Constitutional Government.

THE NOON HOUR

Under the efficient leadership of Charles R. Risley, of Silver Lane, and his able committee, at the noon hour a most bountiful repast was provided for the several hundred guests. The spacious dining room of the church was filled, and a long table was spread in the church yard under the shade of the New England elms.

ADDRESS OF HENRY M. LOVE

THE NEW ENGLAND CHURCH OF UTICA, N. Y.

The Church was the original New England community. Religious freedom was the quest on which the fathers set sail, on an untried sea, for a land almost unknown. Nearly three hundred years have passed since the footstep of civilization was set on the New England shore and from the free church there established, free government has developed. So frequently is the attention called to the men and events of the Revolutionary period, that we perhaps overlook the history of times, earlier but none the less important because formative of principles which survive to this day.

It is over one hundred and twenty-five years since our fathers bore arms for Independence, but it was much longer than that before the Revolution, that our father's fathers, persecuted in a holier cause, driven from their fatherland, planted the Church of God in this wilderness. Let us not forget that religious liberty was before civil liberty, and question whether the latter would have been possible, save for the spirit that descended, pure and virile, to the Revolutionary heroes through the generations that had lived, wrought and died since the days of Plymouth Rock.

It is meet that we, heirs of this blood, should, on this spot, and after the lapse of years, pay reverent tribute to them and to Him, who, through a quarter of a millenium, hath brought us hither.

The causes of the establishment of the New England church are historic. Henry VIII, it will be remembered, severed all ties with the church of Rome, and made himself the head of the Church as well as the State. This was no betterment in the minds of the Reformers. Some of these, while willing to acknowledge and sustain the church of the King, desired changes in matter of creed and practice. There were others whose views could scarce be reconciled with any elements of the old system. About 1550, in the short reign of Edward VI conditions were bettered, but the improvement was as short lived as the King himself, who died before manhood. Then came Mary who married Philip II of Spain and who re-established Romanism, cloaked with many sombre vestments of the Inquisition. Of course, persecution was the lot of all who dared to protest, and many such hied themselves to foreign lands.

FIRST CHURCH OF HARTFORD, CONN.
Established by Rev. Thomas Hooker, in 1633.

In 1558 Elizabeth came to the throne. Whatever her way was, she was bound to have it. She was the head of the church, and there was to be but one church in all her realm. Many of her subjects, and whose number was growing, still believed that many reforms should be made, at least in the practices of the church. These were called Puritans. Again there were others who would have nothing of the established church, and such were called Separatists. They who were satisfied with the existing order of religious affairs were known as Conformists, and were the chosen of her Majesty Elizabeth. To make all men conform was her will and to accomplish this she bent her energies. She established a New Court where offenders in matters of religion were tried by commissioners of her own choosing, not by jury. The offences were for breach of requirements which are seemingly trivial but the principles were important. The wearing of vestments, the use of the ring in marriage, and the sign of the cross, for instance, were remnants of Popery and obnoxious to many. Punishment was given without stint to all who refused to observe the prescribed forms, and was particularly visited upon the clergy inclusive of many of the most intelligent and influential of these. In 1603, James became King and he also made both law and gospel to suit himself. Meanwhile hundreds and thousands fled the country to escape persecution. Naturally, such as worshipped together went together into exile, the pastor, teacher and congregation casting their all into a common lot. One such church people removed to Amsterdam, then to Leyden, and from that body, a number voyaged to the New World and landed at Plymouth Rock in 1620. Charles I came next to the throne but the same abuses continued, until they eventually culminated in the uprising of Cromwell's day.

In 1629 a royal charter was granted to the governor and company of Massachusetts Bay in New England which was an invitation for all the disaffected to seek a home across the sea. In 1633 a company of people from several towns in the county of Essex, England, located in America at Newtown or Cambridge. They were known as the Braintree Company. They had in England become attached to a certain prominent preacher and were willing to emigrate to the New World for the sake of having Mr. Hooker for their minister. The history of this church has been set forth by one of its late Pastors, Rev. George L. Walker, and it will of course be understood that no results of original research are here recorded. So, too, the early history of our country is easily accessible. The relation of the New England church to the Civil government of the time is, however, a subject of such interest that a few words may be given it.

The early settlers of New England came to this country with their ties and affiliations already established. They were congregations of worshippers seeking a home where they could worship in freedom. The church organization was the center of their life and activity. They were not individual adventurers, seeking such fortunes as they might wrest from a New World, . . . they were rather like the children of Israel making a hegira to serve their God in a promised land. They fled from a place where the church and the state were one. Yet the very conditions of their coming seems to have created just such a union. The church being their chiefest concern, extended its control to all their affairs. Such a union was not tolerable to a congregation of Puritans whose power was exhausted by a protest, but no iniquity was seen when the church included all members of the community and all were under its rule.

The theory that the religious community was paramount and the civil subservient, executive only of the will of God as given out by the church, seems to have been accepted as unwritten law. And so it was said that whatever John Cotton preached at Boston the General Council enacted into law. On the other hand, the churches were, like individuals, under the charter government from which sprang all civil rights, and the General Court or Assembly exercised a supervisory power in the temporalities of the church. The relationship is perhaps difficult to state exactly, but it arose because the church people were able to have their own exclusive way, for which indeed they migrated, and it ended only with their power to work their will. While it survived, the power was as tyrannous as any, made no allowance for variations of belief, and bowels of compassion it had none. But as the tide of immigration waxed great and religious and temporal interests became more diverse, the authority of the church fell into its own proper channel. A few instances will illustrate the relationship of which we have spoken. In 1634 Mr. Hooker, with others, was called on to reprove John Eliot for some pulpit utterances relating to the peace made with the Pequots. We have seen that Mr. Hooker's church applied to the General Court for leave to move from Newtown. Again, Mr. Hooker was appointed to deal with Roger Williams who, among other offences, had advised his church to renounce communion with other churches. Arguments were ineffective, however, save the final one advanced by the Court, ordering him to leave the jurisdiction. Mr. Endicott of Salem cut the cross out of the flag seeing it as an idolatrous symbol. Town Commissioners took up the matter and gave him a light sentence, as he did it "out of tenderness of conscience." Mr. Hooker was involved in the controversy. Other illustrations will come to mind and some be mentioned hereafter.

This coincidence between the civil and the religious organizations suggests, however, what may have been the preponderating reason for the migration to Connecticut. The settlers came in communities each with its head. The New England clergy were quite generally men of strong character and marked ability. Each community was, in a sense, distinctive, with its peculiarities and ideals. It was natural that they should seek a field in which to develop in their own way, untrammelled by close neighborhood to others who might, singly or in combinations, exert an undesirable influence or authority. Each church body was sufficient unto itself, for its concerns, and for all those of each of its members. And when we consider that the men of that day were vigorous in mind and body, were not without means, and were pioneers who had set their hearts on freedom, we see how natural it was that they should not pause in the shadow of the Boston churches but go further and in the wilderness seek freedom which was perfect.

Thomas Hooker the first pastor was a man of great endowments and much learning. He had the benefit of a university education and of association with many prominent and learned men, by whom he was held in high esteem, both for his exalted Christian character and intellectual attainments.

Shortly before his exile from England he was invited to give a series of lectures in the church of St. Marys, at Chelmsford, not far from London. Such lectures afforded an opportunity for teaching Puritanism, and were attended by many of the best people of the time and neighborhood, among whom was the Earl of Warwick.

These labors resulted in great betterment, rousing and consolidating the interest of the people and also exciting anew the attention of Bishop Laud, who was determined to crush Hooker, of whom it was reported to Laud that he "surpasses them all for learning, and some other considerable parts, and gains more and far greater followers than all before him." The result was that Mr. Hooker was driven to Holland, afterward barely escaping from England, whither he had come to take ship to America.

The Rev. Samuel Stone, a man of fine education and many graces of mind and heart, was associated with Mr. Hooker as Teacher of the church; with these two was associated Mr. William Goodwin, the Ruling Elder. The office of ruling elder was a nuisance and some of the brethren completely filled the office. The title and place soon fell into disuse, this church having but the one such officer and he removed to Hadley in 1660 with other aggrieved members.

On arriving at Connecticut, land was purchased from the Indians, and village lots laid out and apportioned. One of the holders, as shown on the map of 1640, was Richard Risley, the name on the list of original proprietors being spelled with a W. His lot was near the southwesterly bound of the village.

A meeting house was built on a tract of land including the present State House Square. This building was soon replaced by one on the Meeting House Yard and near the present corner of State St. A burial ground was first made in Meeting House Square, but was soon disused in favor of that adjacent to the church buildings on Main Street.

While the Connecticut settlement had at first been under the rule of Commissioners appointed by the Massachusetts Court, in 1638 a General Court was constituted in the Colony. About the same time was the Hutchinson controversy, Mrs. Anne Hutchinson advancing certain doctrines which were disapproved by the churches, and the outcome of which affair was her excommunication and banishment. This dissention particularly affected the churches of Boston and vicinity but it was treated in a Synod of the Churches in the entire Colony, of which Mr. Hooker was one of the moderators. That body formulated a statement, expressive of doctrines which it deemed erroneous. From time to time, by the wisdom of such representative bodies, questions of doctrine were clarified and the conclusions expressed in definite form. And such was the sincere piety, the exhaustive study and intellectual acumen with which these matters were addressed, that the fathers may well, even to this day, be deemed to have spoken with authority.

The influence of Thomas Hooker being so great in the church and the civil interests being so intimately joined with those which pertained to religion, it would be surprising had he not made his genius felt in affairs of state.

Connecticut claims the "first written constitution," promulgated in Hooker's day. In May, 1638, he preached a sermon before the General Court, then recently organized to formulate a local government, in which he stated the doctrines that choice of magistrates belongs to the people, by God's own allowance, that the privilege of election must be exercised under the will and law of God and that they who appoint officers must have the power to fix their bounds, all because the basis of authority is in the free consent of the people, by which they are the more inclined to obedience.

It seems inconceivable that to that day, doctrines should have been unuttered, which to us seem so elementary and well set.

There were before Hooker's day men of greater statesmanship and genius. But Constitutions are results, not causes. These principles were not hewn freehand out of the solid rock of human thought, they were the product of experience.

The church was practically the first form of local government. It was the expression of the will of God, by the community of the members, through a common covenant, inclusive of all individuals and working out its own ends. Such was the organization with which Mr. Hooker was familiar and which, in fact, had the power of civil government until non-church members became so numerous as to have common interests and power too strong for the church to supervise and control. Too great a credit cannot be given to Mr. Hooker, but we must not overlook the fact that our present theory of government was very largely the evolution of the New England churches. As it was, years and years passed before the mixed relationship of the spiritual and the temporal power was finally solved. It is curious to note for instance, that in 1657, the General Court ordered that, being sensible of the dangers to the Commonwealth, from heretics, Quakers, Adamites and the like, no town or person should harbor any such, under certain penalties. That was a great and present peril, the coming of settlers who were not in full harmony with the church and its rule, because thereby that rule must suffer. To preserve the integrity of its sway, the church was obliged to assert and even enforce its dominion over all in the community. And it was not until later on that it was fully appreciated that Hooker's doctrines were applicable to civil government entirely dissociated from the church rule, as they had been from the first the only basis of such sovereignty.

July 7, 1647, at the age of 61 and after a pastorate of over 13 years, Thomas Hooker died and was buried in the church yard, a monument being placed in 1818 to mark the supposed tomb. Rev. Samuel Stone his former associate succeeded to the charge. He died July 20, 1663, having served 13 years and 9 months with Hooker, 13 years alone and about 3 years with his associate and successor, Rev. John Whiting. Mr. Stone's time was largely spent in a church quarrel. Cotton Mather said that the cause of it was as obscure as the source of the Connecticut river. Its history is almost as long as the river and will not be traced.

During the quarrel a number, including brother Goodwin, withdrew and, about 1659 made a settlement at Hadley, within the "pious and Godly government" of Massachusetts.

Rev. John Whiting was associated with Mr. Stone in 1660 and succeeded him in 1663, continuing till 1670 when he became pastor of the Second Church of Hartford.

Shortly after Mr. Stone's death, Rev. Joseph Haynes became associated with Mr. Whiting, remaining associate pastor till 1670, and the sole pastor till his death, 1679.

It was to be expected that the question as to who were entitled to the full rights of church membership would soon demand attention. Distinct from full communicants were half-way covenanters, as they were termed, who subscribed to the doctrines of the church and were in form members and, in fact, supporters of it, but professed no such Christian experience as to entitle them to full Communion. It seems that originally only communicants had a voice, for instance, in choosing a pastor, though all were obligated to his support.

It was like taxation without representation, to be obliged to support a church in which one had no voice. It was both a political question and one of church government.

About 1664, William Pitkin and others of Hartford petitioned the General Court, requesting that for the future no law may be "of any force to make us pay or contribute to the maintenance of any minister or officer of the church that will neglect . . . to take care of us as of such members of the church as are under his or their charge or care."

A difference of opinion between the two pastors, Mr. Whiting and Mr. Haynes, as to the right to baptism brought the controversy of the day into the First Church. The idea of Hooker's day was that only visible saints were proper to compose the visible church and they only who could respond to certain tests of Christian experience were visible saints. Under the parish system across the seas, baptism of itself made one a member of the church. Mr. Whiting was for the limited membership plan and Mr. Haynes for extending the right to baptism. Finally, in 1670, Mr. Whiting and his party, by the advice of a church council, and with the consent of the General Court, withdrew and formed the Second Church.

About this time it became the law that where there should be more than one religious body in a town, they should severally fix a sum for maintenance of each, to one of which each person should contribute. Such charges were collectible as were other town rates.

About 1680, Isaac Foster was ordained to the pastorate and died in 1682 at the age of 30. So early summoned to full day by the inexorable watch, his remains lie in the same hallowed precincts as do Hooker's, suggesting the wide difference in the two lives. The absence of church records forbids an account of the young pastor's work. He was, however, highly esteemed by the prominent men of his time, and was eminent for piety. How bright his day might have been, who can tell.

Next came Timothy Woodbridge who had charge of the church for about two years before he was ordained in 1685. He continued in the service in all about 49 years, next to the longest term of any of the ministers, dying in 1732.

Throughout these many years he was a foremost figure in the Connecticut Colony, and there were several matters of public concern which invoked his good offices.

The state of religion had languished for some years before he began his ministry. The half way covenant was largely responsible for this. It was one of the untoward consequences of the organization of society, seeming a necessary expedient for including in the church those who professed no religious experience. It illustrates the vacuity of the idea that the church is benefitted by the mere accession of numbers and is not dependent solely upon the spiritual strength of its membership.

This period also witnessed the re-establishment of the English Monarchy and the attempted seizure of the original charter which was spirited away in the darkness.

Yale College was founded about the beginning of the Century which dawned during this ministry, Mr. Woodbridge taking a prominent part in the work, and being very strenuous and persistent to secure its location at Hartford.

The East Hartford Church was founded about this time. The consent of the Hartford societies was first had, with the proviso that all west side land and such on the east side as was owned by west-siders should contribute to the Hartford churches, but the court in 1702, ordered that all persons on the east side should pay to the society there.

Mr. Woodbridge was followed by Daniel Wadsworth who served until his death in 1747.

It was in his time that a new meeting house was built and the preaching of Rev. George Whitfield made him famous throughout New England.

The building project was launched about 1727 and the edifice was dedicated December 30, 1739. The intervening time was largely spent in disputing about its location. The Assembly was petitioned, giving approval to one and to another place, as pleased the majority of the church people, its final sanction being given in May, 1737 to a location covering part of the burial plot.

The occupancy of the new church gave occasion for further dissatisfaction in the seating of members, which was done by committee without regard to the comparative dignity and importance of the several families.

The work of Mr. Whitfield in 1740 had a deep effect. None can question that the personal and close attention that had been given to the subject of religion in the few preceeding years had produced its natural beneficent result. There came a season known as the "Great Awakening" dating from about 1735.

Whitfield's success must have been enlarged by such a condition. But there were some other reasons for the attention he received. He was a young and elegant Episcopal clergyman of England, who had already become famous both at home and in the colonies. It may be that his fiery appeals were necessary to disturb the quiet of some souls, as it undoubtedly did. But his fanciful and extravagant utterances roused the emulation of many who were less enlightened and whose zeal carried them far beyond the limits of common sense and embroiled the people and churches. To quell this the Assembly made an effort, which was quite an extreme, and brought its attendant train of discord. The Hartford Association, as did others, declined to open its pulpits to Mr. Whitfield on a second visit which was projected about 1745.

Mr. Wadsworth died November 12, 1747, and was succeeded by Edward Dorr early in the following year, and whose pastorate extended until his death in 1772. From 1748 until 1795, has been called the period of the "Great Decline" in religion. Mr. Dorr's ministry was measurably successful, but there were many church people who were content to be of the covenant but not solicitous of a spiritual regeneration. Many influences conduced to this, as may be seen in the history of that time. Among the causes was the spirit of controversy, which still survived the Whitfield days, and also the fact that the French and English war demanded so much of time and cost. About 1762 an attempt was made to establish an Episcopal church in Hartford and the foundation of a building was laid.

Episcopacy was the established religion of England and our fathers looked with concern upon the attempt to plant it in New England. It was feared as an encroachment which would in time imperil if not destroy religious and civil freedom in the colonies, being as it was the child of a foreign state owning a monarch as its head. The fear was perhaps exaggerated as there were among the 4,881 people of Hartford in 1774, but 111 Episcopalians.

We now come to the pastorate of Nathan Strong from 1774 to 1816 one of the most important in its influences for the cause of liberty and the spiritual growth of the church. Mr. Strong was graduated at Yale in the same class with Timothy Dwight and of equal class standing with him. Of him it was said by president Stiles that he was the most universal scholar that he ever knew.

His varied and ample talents, gracing him as the vestments of a prince, made him a conspicuous figure among the men of his time. He was able, with ease and force, to occupy a sphere which was not limited by the duties of a pastorate.

The formative period following the successful issue of the Revolution was perhaps as perilous as the war itself. Had the Federal Constitution not been adopted as it was, the several interests which were then united might have diverged further and further, each gaining force until a union had become well-nigh impossible. But at this time he published a series of articles which, coming from a man of such influence, must have exerted a tremendous power for the adoption of the Constitution, which occurred in his church in 1788.

He also published sermons and articles and with others prepared the Hartford Selection of Hymns, which had a wide circulation and extensive use. In 1797 he was active in forming a Missionary Society, which was merged in the Missionary Society of Connecticut, and in connection with which he established a magazine which was published for several years.

He was for a time engaged in the distilling business with a man named Smith. In this he was unsuccessful and by the offices of the sheriff was relieved from further care in that direction. The work of the church most deeply concerns us now, and in that there was a great vintage. At Dr. Strong's accession there were but 15 male communicants. In the early years of his ministry there was no great growth, but later on, under his kindly, earnest and judicious devotion, there were repeated awakenings and many were added to the church. A new edifice was erected in 1807 followed by an additional society building in 1814.

This interesting and successful ministry ended with the death of Dr. Strong on Christmas day, 1816.

He was followed by Joel Howes who was active pastor from 1818 to 1864 and pastor emeritus until his death in 1867, concluding thus a term of over 49 years, the longest of any of the ministers of that church. His pastorate was not an incident of his career but his life itself. As his service stands out thus unique, so does the man. He is not to be likened to his predecessors who were born and reared under auspicious influences. His life and work illustrates the possibilities of good timber and the figure is not inappropriate, for his early years, devoid of religious training and surroundings, were much spent in the pastimes of the forest and unconventional life. Quite suddenly he came to his religious and intellectual awakening. His success proves that he had a mind and character of great native worth. He might well be taken as a type of rugged American manhood, the product of the Revolutionary days. He was a man of one purpose. Apparently void of the discursive talents of his predecessor, all his efforts were given directly to the work of his pastorate. Yet his influence was not less than earlier pastors, but was deep, strong and lasting. Under his care the records of the church were more correctly kept and pains were taken in the matter of gospel discipline.

Among the first efforts was the organization of Sunday School work and in 1819 came an important revival which was followed by many others throughout his life. He had a special interest in young men and delivered a series of lectures addressed to them. These were published in successive editions. He published other writings each of which had the same definite purpose. The great upbuilding of the church under his ministry enabled it to survive successive migrations at the founding of new churches.

In 1824, about 100 left to organize the North Church; in 1832 others went to form the Free or Fourth Church; October, 1852, a party went to establish the Pearl Street Church and in 1865, some took part in starting the Asylum Hill Church.

Rev. Wolcott Calkins was associated with Dr. Howes for about two years, until 1864. He was succeeded by Rev. George H. Gould, who continued after the death of Dr. Howes until 1870.

Rev. Elias H. Richardson was next, serving from 1872 until 1879. After him came Rev. George Leon Walker whose work has included an extended history of the church, to which credit is due for the particulars here given. The details of recent years we leave to the chronicler of the future. Here ends our story of a venerable institution, the type of many another tabernacle set up by our fathers in the New England wilderness. They were men of faith, were our fathers. Their religion was a hardy growth touching every concern of life. It had peculiarities of color and form, natural and perhaps necessary in their day, and possibly unnecessary in our present mode. But all harshness is redeemed by their sincere piety. They were possessed of reverence for God, believed His word and acknowledged His rightful dominion. In their lives was a deep and vibrant undertone of spiritual vigor. They built a theology deep and strong. Religion can not survive creeds, and well would it be for us to lay hold of the doctrines which made our fathers' lives what they were. By these the church survived its days of travail, even those of the half-way covenant. Religion pure and undefiled, the men of the world respect and to such will they cleave, if to any.

By such alone can the church do its work, nor will the tinkling of cymbals, the herding of the curious, nor imitation fleshpots, nor costly attire avail it aught.

ADDRESS OF LESLIE L. BREWER

THE LOCATION OF THE EARLY RISLEYS IN HARTFORD

Relatives and Friends:

I have been requested to say a few words about the location of the early Risleys in Hartford; to tell you something about the kind and character of the men and women through whom you may trace your origin. I may say without seeming to boast that they are such that no one need feel ashamed: indeed! they have cause to feel justly proud. This statement is not my own personal opinion. History to-day lies an open book so that he who runs may read: in it you will find recorded the noble deeds performed by the bravest and most progressive men of all ages, and here you will find that the name of Risley is not wanting.

Abraham Lincoln in his Gettysburg address said: "Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the principle that all men are created equal."

About three centuries ago our common ancestor, Richard Risley and less than one hundred other brave souls under the leadership of Rev. Thomas Hooker emigrated from the Massachusetts Bay Colony because of oppression: journeyed through the wilderness, enduring the greatest hardships: and finally settled in the Connecticut Valley at Hartford, forming the first permanent white settlement within the limits of the Commonwealth of Connecticut. Most of us to-day, in reading history and tracing the beginning and growth of our country, fall short of giving to the sturdy pioneer who settled this wilderness his just measure of credit. To us the early struggles, hardships and growth from settlements to colonies and thence to states, furnish interesting reading: to them the danger and privations were all too real. Starting in oppression they were obliged to encounter every species of danger, even to famine.

Dutch Point

All for what?—Freedom to worship God and live their life according to their own ideals. Their eyes were fixed upon the blue vault of Heaven; their trust in God. Side by side among the wanderers traveled the little prattling child and the more hardy adventurer. The chubby face and the haggard, angular visage were both turned toward the cloudless Heavens in heartfelt entreaty to the One Supreme Being for guidance and comfort. Far away to the southward, there lay a fertile valley, trodden only by the wild beasts of the forests, inhabited only by the Indians. Such was the scene that met the eyes of the weary wanderers.

Richard Risley, the founder of the name in America, was in lineage a Norman, in religion a Puritan. He was born probably in Lancastershire or Oxfordshire, England, prior to 1615. At an early age he emigrated to the Massachusetts Bay Colony in the good ship Griffin, sailing July 15th, 1633, in company with Rev. Thomas Hooker and his little band of followers.

The Griffin brought from England nearly the whole membership of Hooker's church in Braintree numbering less than one hundred persons. They landed in Boston harbor in September of the same year and settled at Cambridge, where Rev. Thomas Hooker was made pastor of the new church in October. There existed at this time in the Massachusetts Bay and Salem Colonies a struggle for power between the Church and Civil Magistrates, in which Hooker's company did not participate; and accordingly they secured permission of the General Court to remove to the Connecticut Valley, where Deacon Wm. Goodwin and Rev. Wm. Stone, as trustees, had secured from the Indians a tract of land embracing the present city of Hartford with the adjoining towns of East Hartford, Manchester and West Hartford and Farmington. In the month of May 1636 the entire Hooker Company set out for this destination, through the tractless wilderness, driving their cattle before them. A division of land was made in what is now the center of Hartford. Each male member of the Company was given two and one-half acres and was required to build a house on his land within one year or forfeit his portion to the Colony.

The land allotted to Richard Risley, on which he built a house was located on that part of Lafayette Street, running south of the Connecticut Capitol, the house being situated at the first angle in this street. This street was then known as Cooper Lane and the land mentioned must have been on what is now Ward Street. The present Ward and Webster Streets are a continuation of Cooper Lane. In the following year the Connecticut settlers were forced to unite for their defense against the Pequot Indians against whom Richard probably served.

In 1638 Richard participated in the adoption of a document called the "Fundamental Order," the first written constitution known to history. In or prior to 1640 Richard was married, the maiden name of his wife is unknown. They were blessed with three children, Sarah, Samuel and Richard, jr. These children were all baptized in the First Church of Hartford. Richard and his wife lived, prior to the birth of Richard, jr., at Hockanum on the east side of the great river, on the land now occupied by the Oasis Club-house. He was also owner of considerable land in Hartford and East Hartford as shown by the land records and various deeds. In October, 1648, Richard died at Hockanum. There was filed in Court that year the inventory of his estate, amounting in all to about seven hundred dollars. The various pieces of land deeded by Richard, jr. (2), to his children were located at Hockanum east of that river between Hockanum River and Pewter Pot brook, the division line between East Hartford and Glastonbury.

As I glance over this assemblage and my mind reverts to the first sturdy pioneer Richard, who was as it were the trunk and you the branches of the tree; the question naturally comes to us all, what spirit prompted our early ancestors to forego all the comforts of an advanced civilization? I will attempt to answer "It was the spirit of liberty that gave to America its Puritan Pilgrims who were willing to do, dare and suffer, in order that they might form the little republic of the Lords Free People, and who by their righteous and sturdy independence laid the foundation for that system which ripened into "the government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Dr. Samuel Risley of Philadelphia was, at the last minute, unable to come to this meeting.

Miss Olive Risley Seward, on account of illness was obliged to telegraph her regrets.

ADDRESS OF MRS. ZADA RISLEY SMITH, OF HAMILTON, N. Y.

In March 1788 one David Risley 3rd, son of Moses Risley of East Hartford, Connecticut, after a months travel in a westward direction, joined Hugh White the first settler in Oneida Co., New York; a friend from the home state. That spring, by the aid of his ox team, a clearing was made, crops were planted and a log cabin erected on a piece of land, south of the present village of New Hartford, N. Y. Here he died in 1838. His children were Electa Randall of New Hartford, Cynthia Clark, who lived in New Jersey, Lucy Foster of New Hartford, David Hamilton, who died in his country's service at sea, and George W. who emigrated to Virginia and from there to Illinois. The military records of New York State show that David Risley was an ensign in 1795, and later adjutant and captain.

Encouraged by his brother's report of the boundless possibilities of the new country, Elijah who was David's senior by ten years, followed him hither, sometime before 1790, but does not appear to have taken up lands within the present boundaries of New Hartford, but located subsequently within the vicinity of Cazenovia, Madison County, N. Y., where he resided till 1806 when he again emigrated with his family this time to Fredonia, then Canadaway, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where his descendants now live. Miss Olive Risley Seward who is expected to be present with us to-day being his great grandchild.

It was Elijah Risley in company with Jedediah Sanger and Samuel Wells who, July 11th, 1793, began the publication of the first newspaper west of the Hudson Valley "The Whites-town Gazette." At this time the nearest paper mill was at Albany the paper from which, with the type, was brought from that city, a three weeks' journey.

This journalistic enterprise judged by the standard of a modern metropolitan publication seems diminutive, but when viewed in the light of the then existing conditions, it was an effort worthy of all credit. The present Utica Herald Dispatch is the fruit of the seed then planted.

The paper was short lived, two copies are now in existence in Utica, N. Y. It was a two-page sheet, below the title of which it is stated that the printing was done opposite "to the meeting house" meaning the Presbyterian church in New Hartford, which was organized by a society meeting called according to law, held at a barn of Jedediah Sanger of Whitestown on the 6th of July, 1791, by the Rev. Jonathan Edwards, jr.

There was no telegraphic or editorial news beyond expressing the importance of a public newspaper in a growing community. One Mr. Merrill advertises that unless certain debtors pay, they will be prosecuted.

Allen Risley, the 2nd brother of David and 8th child of Moses of East Hartford, Connecticut, died in 1836 on the premises which he had cleared of the virgin forest and where he had built a log house in 1790. His home was south and east of the present village of New Hartford on what is known as the Chuckery Road. On March 25th, 1797, Allen Risley was appointed Lieutenant from Herkimer Co.

The fourth brother, Moses, a revolutionary soldier settled near Oneida Lake, N. Y., at Fish Creek between 1790—1800. He was original in speech and manner and it was related that one day in a spirit of peculiar hilarity he tied a brush-harrow to a bull's tail and set the animal loose in a field of growing wheat. His vigorous mirth was a measure of his mind and the mischief done a fair exponent of his deed.

William Risley, who was undoubtedly a descendant of Richard 1st of Hartford, Connecticut, is said to have been born at Patchogue, Long Island. He served throughout the entire revolution and was honorably discharged after the battle of Yorktown. In 1789 he emigrated to Sanquoit and for several years was employed as a miller. He moved into Herkimer Co. where he erected Risley's Mill, one of several which he afterward acquired and operated. He retained until his death the appellation of "Honest Bill," in recognition of the fact that he took honest toll from the grist brought to him to be ground. The old hero and soldier died suddenly in Litchfield, N. Y., in 1854 at the age of 79. His oldest son Eli continued to run the mill until his own death, which was caused by a fall from the dam he was repairing.

It is known that Richard Risley of East Hartford, Connecticut, settled in Paris, Oneida Co., N. Y., about 1800. His military career is noteworthy because of his connection as sergeant with Col. Jemson's dragoons who had the honor of capturing Major Andre and exposing the conduct of Benedict Arnold. His oldest son was named Jemson in honor of his Colonel. Most of his descendants are in Genesee Co., N. Y.

Jonathan Risley married Phoebe Deming. My great grandfather was the son of Nathaniel Risley of East Hartford. His family record was secured from this First Church of East Hartford. In 1792 he emigrated with a part of his family to N. Y. state and settled in the north west corner of Brookfield, Madison Co. It was here in a log house that their youngest child, Sylvester, my grandfather, was born, June 12th, 1797, on lot 13 of the 19th township of the Twenty Towns, so called. The Twenty Towns were on the west side of the Unadilla River, Township No. 1 being at the junction of the Susquehanna and Chenango; No. 20 in Sangerfield and Bridgewater.

This land embraced in the Twenty Towns was ceded to the state by the Indians in a treaty negotiated by Governor Clinton at Fort Schuyler, now Utica, and opened to settlers in '89 and '90. The lands embraced in townships 18 and 20 and all lands in Brookfield not then occupied were conveyed January 1st, 1795, to Michael Meyers, Jedediah Sanger and John I. Morgan. My great grandfather must have acquired his land previous to this time, as the books of John Morgan show he never had a title to lot 13 in the 19th township. The same year that Jonathan settled in Brookfield, his eldest son, Jonathan, jr., with his wife, Lucy Benton, settled in the Sanquoit Valley. Jonathan was a man of the marked characteristics, which pertained to the early Risley settlers. He possessed a strong and vigorous judgment, was quick to resent injustice, abhorred oppression in any form and showed great energy and perseverance and an indomitable will. It took him five days to take a grist of 60 pounds from Madison County to Whitestown to be ground, twenty miles on an Indian trail. The nearest blacksmith was at Clinton, a five days distance. For years he kept a hotel in the frame house, which succeeded the log house as a dwelling on lot 13. The frame of this house is now covered and used as a barn on the premises, owned many years by my grandfather and father and later by his brother until their death. In 1895 it passed out of the family. He died here in 1813 and is now buried in the old Tarrytown Cemetery near Sangerfield, N. Y., which through the efforts of Mr. Edwin Risley has recently been put into creditable condition. His sons, Eleazer, Elisha, Chauncey, and daughter, Hannah, who married John Chambers, settled near their father in Madison Co. and many of their descendants reside in that vicinity to-day. Chauncey died at Sackett's Harbor as a soldier of the war of 1812; he left a daughter, the late Mrs. Walter Todd of Vernon, N. Y. Elizur, who died in Madison, was the grandfather of Mr. Reuben Risley and great grandfather of Prof. Adna Wood Risley.

The youngest son of Jonathan, my grandfather Sylvester, always resided and died on the land of lot 13 of the 19th township. He with his wife, Thankful Brewer, to whom he was married October 17th, 1817, are buried in Hamilton, N. Y. Their children were as follows: Henry, Julius Caesar, Perry Smith, Christopher Columbus, Louisa, Gordon Fox, Daniel Brewer, Smith, Byron, Marion Francis my father, Mary Ann, and John Milton. Only two of these children are now living, D. Brewer Risley of Hamilton, N. Y. and J. Milton of Cassville and of Sylvester's 100 odd descendants only 13 carry the Risley name.

Jonathan oldest son, Benjamin, Mr. E. H. Risley's grandfather did not leave his native state, but his two sons, Elizur and Chauncey settled in Madison Co. in the years 1824 and 1834 respectively. Other Risleys who settled in the central portions early in the 19th century were Stephen who settled at Madison, N. Y. Jerry, a brother of my great grandfather, settled in Brookfield. Beyond this fact I know little. There were other Risleys in Onondaga, Jefferson and St. Lawrence Counties in New York State.

The characteristics of the early Risley settlers in central New York were well defined. They were the worthy descendants from a line of honorable ancestors.

You and I are unable to comprehend the difficulties, which naturally surrounded the early pioneer. It is evident that they were men of constructive force. There was no lack of energy for they were indefatigable workers. In their dealings they were vigorous, uncompromising and transparent. Because our great grandfathers all tilled the soil and it yielded them un-failing gratifications with most particular results, we their descendants, who now reside in town and country from which they cut down the first forest tree are charmed indefinitely by rural landscapes. Fondness for country life is ingrained. The Risleys at present who are farmers are the best in their line: they are men with native sagacity who can appraise men and things at true value. As it is true of our agriculturists, it is the same with our financiers, lawyers, physicians, in fact, in all the walks of life, in which the Risleys are found, they seem clean, fair-minded, generous-hearted men. Our women as of old, possess gentleness and patience, are tender and full of efficiency. There are proportionately few professional women, but they may be considered representative, as Ruskin tells us, they have the "power to heal, to redeem, to guide and to guard."

We, the rising generations, understand the good name borne by our ancestors, and if it be tarnished now, the blame is with us, not them. It is our duty to give heed to these elements, which wrought out such results and to see that a high sense of equity, justice and honor be thoroughly implanted and preserved in the minds and hearts of our children.

The assembly in conclusion, then sang "My old New England Home," led by the orchestra.

LETTER FROM THE HONORABLE HANSON A. RISLEY

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colorado, July 22, 1890.

ROMAINE RISLEY, Esq.,

Corresponding Secretary, &c., &c.

DEAR SIR,—I have received with pleasure your invitation to attend the re-union of the Risley family at Madison Lake on the 31st instant. Few things would gratify me more than to be with you on that occasion and see face to face and take by the hand so many of my kindred, whom it has not been my privilege to know. Although strangers and widely separated we are of the same family stock. My grandfather, Elijah Risley, resided at Glastonbury, Connecticut, at the period of the war of the Revolution, volunteered as a private and received a pension for his services. I do not know when this was granted to him, but I have in my possession a certificate dated September 28, 1819, signed J. C. Calhoun, Secretary of War, stating that “his name was inscribed on the Pension List Roll of the New York Agency at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence the 16th day of May, 1818.” After the war he moved to East Hartford, where my father, Elijah Risley, Jr., was born May 7, 1787. About 1790, he again moved to Whites-town, now New Hartford, N. Y., where he engaged in business enterprises, among others the publication of a newspaper, one of the first published in the state west of Johnstown. Three brothers, David and Allen, settled in or near New Hartford, and Moses, who settled in Vienna, N. Y., about the same time. In my early boyhood my grandfather related to me an amusing incident illustrating his persistence of character and the difference in modes of travel and transportation between that and the present period. Goods and persons between Albany and Utica were then hauled by teams over the highway, except that in summer the Mohawk river was navigated by boats, locks and a canal having been constructed by private enterprise around Little Falls, the ruins of which may still be seen in passing by railroad. He was journeying from Albany westward over the highway with a sleigh load of merchandise. The snow was deep and drifted in the valleys and there were deep cuts or passages sometimes many rods in length, where it was impossible for teams or sleighs to pass each other. In case of meetings of teams in such passages, by some rule of right understood by travelers, it was customary for one of the teams to back out—a difficult thing to do—and to allow the other to pass. A meeting occurred one morning between him and an eastern bound traveler in one of these deep cuts. The parties differed on the question of priority of right of way and both refused to back out. After some debate and warm words grandfather deliberately unhitched his team, unloosed the harness and fed the horses, arranged his seat, got out his lunch box and proceeded as if preparing for a long rest—as much as to say to his obstinate neighbor of the road, “I am here to stay.” Presently he discovered the other party quietly fixing himself in his sleigh and rolling himself up in a robe as if to sleep. Two or three hours passed in unbroken silence. Grandfather, somewhat perplexed at the situation, bethought him of a large family Bible he had bought in Albany, and getting it out and setting himself comfortably, his back against the boxes, commenced at the first chapter of Genesis, read through the history of the creation and on through the account of the deluge, passing some hours in serious study and meditation, his neighbor hardly changing his position. At length he raised himself up on his elbow, encouraging the hope that he was weary and would soon give in, looked at grandfather intently as he continued reading and turning over the leaves, and at last addressed him in a serious tone. “My friend,” said he, “you seem to have a very interesting book; when you have finished reading it, I will thank you if you will kindly allow me to read it.” Grandfather was subdued. A compromise was effected, the question of priority amicably adjusted, and each went on his way rejoicing.

At an early day a company was chartered to construct a highway, called, I believe, The Cherry Valley Turnpike, from Albany to Cazenovia in Madison County, and my grandfather became interested in the company, both as stockholder and contractor, constructing a long line of the road and impairing his fortune in the enterprise. He moved his family to Cazenovia and was one of the earliest settlers there. I first visited Cazenovia in 1835. Jacob TenEyck, a prominent citizen, drove me to the farm at the fork of the two turnpikes on which he said my grandfather settled, which was still called the Risley farm. He also drove me to a brick hotel on the main street, and said on the spot where it stood my grandfather built the first hotel, and I believe the first frame house in Cazenovia. He drove me also on to another street not far distant to a point where the old tavern or a part of it had been moved and there it then stood a dwelling house near which Mr. Litchfield, who had married Mary TenEyck, then lived. I am not informed what engaged my grandfather's attention in Cazenovia. He was at one time Clerk of the Town and then Justice of the Peace, and was called Squire Risley. In 1806 he emigrated to Fredonia, then Canadaway, an Indian name, in the County of Chautauqua, and was one of the earliest of the frontier settlers. My father, Elijah, Jr., about twenty years old, accompanied him. In the last year of his life, he gave me a pathetic account of leaving Cazenovia. His father had been unfortunate in business, was without property, with a family of ten children and his resolution for once failed him. He spoke of his discouragements; said he did not know what to do and shed tears. Father encouraged him, inquired if there was not some new country farther west where land was cheap, and he could go and retrieve his fortunes. He replied that there was such a country a great way off, beyond Buffalo, but he was growing old and had not courage to undertake it. Horace, his oldest son, had married and settled by himself. It was in the course of nature for the other children to do the same. Father told him he would go with and remain with him. Whatever occurred he would stand by him. His father's spirits and hope revived; the next day they were on their journey to Fredonia, the rest of the family following in about a year, the journeys of both being made in mid-winter in sleighs. They took up from the Holland Land Company a large tract of land west of the village and immediately commenced improvements. The country around for many miles was a dense wilderness and they encountered all the privations and hardships of the pioneer life. Fredonia was situated midway between Buffalo and Erie in Pennsylvania, a distance of ninety miles. The mail between the east and the west, which it now takes at least twenty railroad cars to transport daily, was then carried back and forth once a week on horseback by a woman—a Mrs. Richard Williams. Her husband, who had the contract, died, and she was allowed to carry out the contract. She was obliged to ford Cattaraugus creek and other streams on the way and to swim her horse across in times of high water. I distinctly remember to have seen her week after week pass my father's door, on her journey, after stopping to deliver packages or to obtain food. After a time my father became a merchant, establishing in Fredonia the first store in Chautauqua County, and my grandfather built the first flouring mill in the county. He also planted one of the first orchards. About that time, making a journey to Madison on horseback, he brought home some cuttings and grafted his young trees with the Rhode Island Greening, Seek-no-further, and Spitzenberg, and one very fine yellow fall apple, which became noted all over that section as the Risley apple, and is still growing on the place near by where my father lived. Grandfather was a man of energy, perseverance and enterprise, always having credit and some means, was a member of the Episcopal Church, a good citizen and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his neighbors up to the time of his death in 1841. He was buried in the old burying ground at Fredonia, now a part of Forest Hill Cemetery.

My father, Elijah Risley, Jr., was actively engaged in various business enterprises in and about Fredonia, during his long life, notably in raising and distributing garden seeds in company with his brothers, William and Levi, under the firm name of E. Risley & Co. This grew into a large business. They employed from forty to fifty men in growing the seeds, twenty to thirty women in putting them into paper bags, and some twenty to thirty teams in distributing them through all the states, California included, and the Canadas. They often raised five hundred bushels of onion seed annually, and the same of cucumber seed. It was said they were the largest garden seed growers in the country. There were five sons in this branch of the Risley family; one died in early life, the other four lived to past the age of eighty years. There were five daughters who lived to past the common allotment of life, some of them to advanced years. Neither of the sons nor daughters is now living.

My father early became interested in military affairs, and from the ranks was promoted through the various offices of the line up to being the first Brigadier, and then Major-General of the State Militia for the District, composed of Alleghany, Cattaraugus and Chautauqua counties. He, as commanding general, with his full staff, was present at the reception of Lafayette in Fredonia, in 1824, and had prominent part in the orders and exercises of the day. He was at different periods Supervisor of the Town, Sheriff of the County and member of Congress. He was a director in the New York and Erie Railroad Company, and a promoter of other railroad enterprises and public corporations. In 1810 he married Abigail (called Nabby) Brigham, daughter of John Brigham, also a Revolutionary soldier, who came to Fredonia, from the Town of Madison, N. Y., in 1808 or 1809. It may interest you to know that I have now in my house an old bureau with brass trimmings standing on high scroll legs, which my grandmother brought in a sleigh from Malden, Mass., to Madison, and from there to Fredonia, both journeys being made in mid-winter. It is a little remarkable that the old piece of furniture, after a century's use in the family, should now be preserved a choice relic in a dwelling at the foot of the Rocky Mountains. My father and mother had six children, two sons, Laurens G. Risley, of Dunkirk, N. Y., and myself, and four daughters, all of whom married lawyers, the sons marrying doctors' daughters. Only three of the family survive, Laurens G., Minerva Risley Cushing,* and myself. My father died in January, 1870, and was buried in the old part of Forest Hill Cemetery, Fredonia.

The relationship being remote and our respective places of residence distant from each other, I have had but little personal intercourse with the branch of the family in central New York. Hamilton Risley, I believe the eldest son of David, visited my father in Fredonia in about 1830. Not long after I was travelling east by the Erie canal, and leaving the boat a few miles west, walked to Salina, where Hamilton then lived, called and partook of breakfast with him and his family and he drove me to Syracuse and put me on the same boat to continue my journey. If my memory serves me correctly Salina was then a larger place than Syracuse. I was a student in the Academy at Hamilton, Madison County, in 1831-2. I there made the acquaintance of James W. Nye, a law student who became distinguished as an orator, Governor of Nevada and United States Senator. I heard Theodore Weld and Gerrit Smith speak in a public meeting, and Hiram Denio, Samuel Beardsley and Joshua A. Spencer, all eminent lawyers, speak in the Court House in Utica.

On my way to Hamilton, I paid a visit of a few days to my great uncle, David Risley, at New Hartford or a little south of there, and saw his brother Allen, who lived on Paris Hill. Mr. Clark, a New Jersey lawyer, who was counsel in a famous lawsuit between different sects of Quakers, and had married Cynthia Risley, daughter of David, was there with his wife on a visit. Mr. Foster, who married a younger daughter and was living in the neighborhood, and a son-in-law, I think, who was living in New Hartford, were there almost daily, and

* Lieutenant William B. Cushing, who sank the Confederate ironclad Albatross in the Roanoke River October 27, 1863. was from this family.

George Risley, the youngest son, was there and drove me round to Utica, York Mills and Whitestown. I have very pleasant memories of that visit made nearly sixty years ago. We were most hospitably entertained by that excellent family. We spent the evenings in social merriment. I recall with what touching pathos Mr. Clark sang: "There came to the beach a poor exile of Erin." And above all I remember that every night after the social pleasures were ended, the whole household joined in family prayers, the venerable head with serious dignity leading the devotions. How many of those worthy kindred may join in your proposed re-union, or whether any of them survive, I do not know. I have only met two of them since—Mr. Foster in Albany in 1860-61, when I was clerk of the assembly, and George Risley once called at my house in Fredonia or Dunkirk—but I have ever felt grateful that I was connected even in a remote degree with a family so eminently worthy.

I have never seen your lovely lake, but the town and county of Madison have for me many pleasant associations. It was always a delight to see Cazenovia. I have known many who have grown up or lived there. In my boyhood I was for three years clerk for Leroy Farnham in Dunkirk, N. Y., and his brothers, Orlando and Thomas, all Cazenovian boys, were more or less with me. I was well acquainted with General J. D. Ledyard and Jacob Ten Eyck, and have more than once been a guest at their princely homes. Walter Smith, Walter Chester and James Van Buren, once clerks for Mr. Ten Eyck, were my friends, and I was their legal adviser for years in Dunkirk. I knew very well Dr. Lyman's daughters, Mary, Henrietta, Delia and Martha. Henry Ten Eyck, too, was my friend, always cordial and true. It is sad to reflect how many, nearly all, have passed away.

While a student in Hamilton, I once with a friend visited Utica in a sleigh, and on our return we stopped one night in Madison or Madison Center. It happened there was a ball at the hotel, and on invitation we joined it, and very likely I danced with some whose children will join your festivities.

I fortunately found there Miss Harriet Jackson, whose acquaintance I made while she was visiting friends there, a family of McClures, who had migrated from Madison to Fredonia.

When my term at Hamilton Academy was ended, and I was leaving for home, classmates gave me a horseback ride and supper at a noted hotel a mile or so west of Madison, kept, I think, by one Perceval. So my parting with loved associates must have been near where your reunion is to be celebrated. A family of Barkers—Hezekiah, William and Leverett—and other founders and citizens of Fredonia hailed from Madison, so that all my life long Madison has been a dear name and locality to me.

Some ten to fifteen years ago I met in Broadway, New York, a former well-known citizen of Utica, Charles P. Kirkland, Esq. We had known each other well, but had not met in years. As he took me by the hand, he said: "This is a strange coincidence. I have not seen you in a long time, but you were in my mind this morning. I hold in my hand an instrument bearing your family name. You may not know that Washington was quite given to land speculation. While on the way at the close of the Revolution he had thought of the country west of Albany, and anticipated its early settlement. He purchased a tract of land and held it for a rise in value. At the date of this instrument (which date I do not remember), he sold the several parcels, one to a great uncle of yours, Allen, I believe, and this is the original deed, signed and executed by George Washington and Martha, his wife; witnessed by Tobias Lear, who was his private secretary, and acknowledged before J. Kent, J. P.," the first knowledge I had that the renowned Chancellor had been a Justice of the Peace, and continued Mr. Kirkland, "I found the deed among old papers in my office, and am now on my way to deposit it in the office of the New York Historical Society, of which I am a member."

Pardon my long recital of incidents that may not interest you, for your reunion will mostly be of those of a younger generation. I thank you most cordially for inquiring me out and inviting me to share your festivities, and assure you that I regard it an honor to bear the same name, and that kindred blood flows in our veins.

Sincerely wishing that you may have a pleasant reunion, I am, with great respect,

Very truly yours,

HANSON A. RISLEY.

All noble men, worthy of their sires;
From whence we flow, as from the mountain spring,
Their toils, their trials and their fames I sing.
More wide in scope, more fresh, more fair and joyous,
Than Plato dreamed, or than Homer sung.
